

Ford Takes Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford took office as 38th President of the United States Friday, pronounced an end to "our long national nightmare," then set about the business of shaping his administration.

In swift succession he met with congressional leaders, with senior aides to the resigned Richard M. Nixon, with economic advisers, diplomats, and a group of personal associates who will counsel him on selecting a White House staff.

A spokesman said Ford has asked Nixon's key aides to remain on the job during the time of transition.

Ford concluded his oath of office — "so help me God" — at 12:03 p.m. EDT. It was administered by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in the East Room of the White House, before an audience of the leaders of American government.

Actually, Ford assumed the powers of the presidency 28 minutes earlier, when Nixon's formal resignation was handed to secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

After repeating the oath, Ford stepped to the rostrum and, with simple but moving eloquence, addressed the American people with "just a little straight talk among friends."

He promised a government of openness and of candor, and a continuing quest for peace. He noted that he was not elected President and asked the American people "to confirm me as your President with your prayers."

Ford's voice was firm, but broke for an instant as he spoke of Nixon, forced to resignation by the Watergate scandals:

"May our former president, who brought peace to millions, find it for himself."

The new President spoke of the scandals that have wracked the government:

"As we bind up the internal wounds of Watergate, more painful and more poisonous than those of foreign wars, let us restore the golden rule to our political process, and let brotherly love purge our hearts of suspicion and hate."

TerHorst said only two members of the top Nixon staff had left as of Friday, Ronald L. Ziegler, the former press secretary, and Rose Mary Woods, who had been presidential secretary.

A four-man team was assembled to counsel Ford on the restructuring of the White House staff. Those advisers are former Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, NATO Ambassador Donald M. Rumsfeld, Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, and former Virginia Rep. John O. Marsh Jr. All had served with Ford in the House.

Ford told economic advisers that control of inflation would be the "high and first priority" of his administration.

TerHorst said Allan Greenspan, nominated by Nixon to be chairman of the council of economic advisers, is Ford's choice for the position.

TerHorst announced that Robert T. Hartmann, chief of Ford's vice presidential staff, would become a counselor to the new President.

He said also that Alexander M. Haig, Nixon's staff chief, had told Ford top aides to the resigned president would remain on the job "in our hour of common cause."

Nixon's letter of resignation, delivered to Kissinger at 10:35 a.m. CDT, said simply:

"I hereby resign the office of President of the United States."

With that 11-word message, the power of the highest office passed from the first man ever to resign the presidency to the first man ever to hold it without election.

"... My fellow Americans, our long national nightmare is over," said Ford.

Ford promised to "follow my instincts of openness and candor will full confidence that honesty is always the best policy in the end ... "God helping me, I will not let you down," he concluded.

In the same room, barely two hours earlier, Nixon took tearful leave of his Cabinet and key aides, telling them that greatness comes in times of trouble, not triumph, and that defeat can be a beginning, not an end.

Nixon said no aide of his profited at public expense. "Mistakes, yes. But for personal gain, never."

Within minutes, Nixon, his wife, daughter Tricia and son-in-law Edward Cox, board a helicopter for a five-hour journey to California and seclusion at San Clemente.

In California, a crowd of more than 3,000 applauded the former president, heard him promise that he will continue to work for peace. "Having completed one task does not mean that we will sit in this marvelous California sun and do nothing," Nixon said.

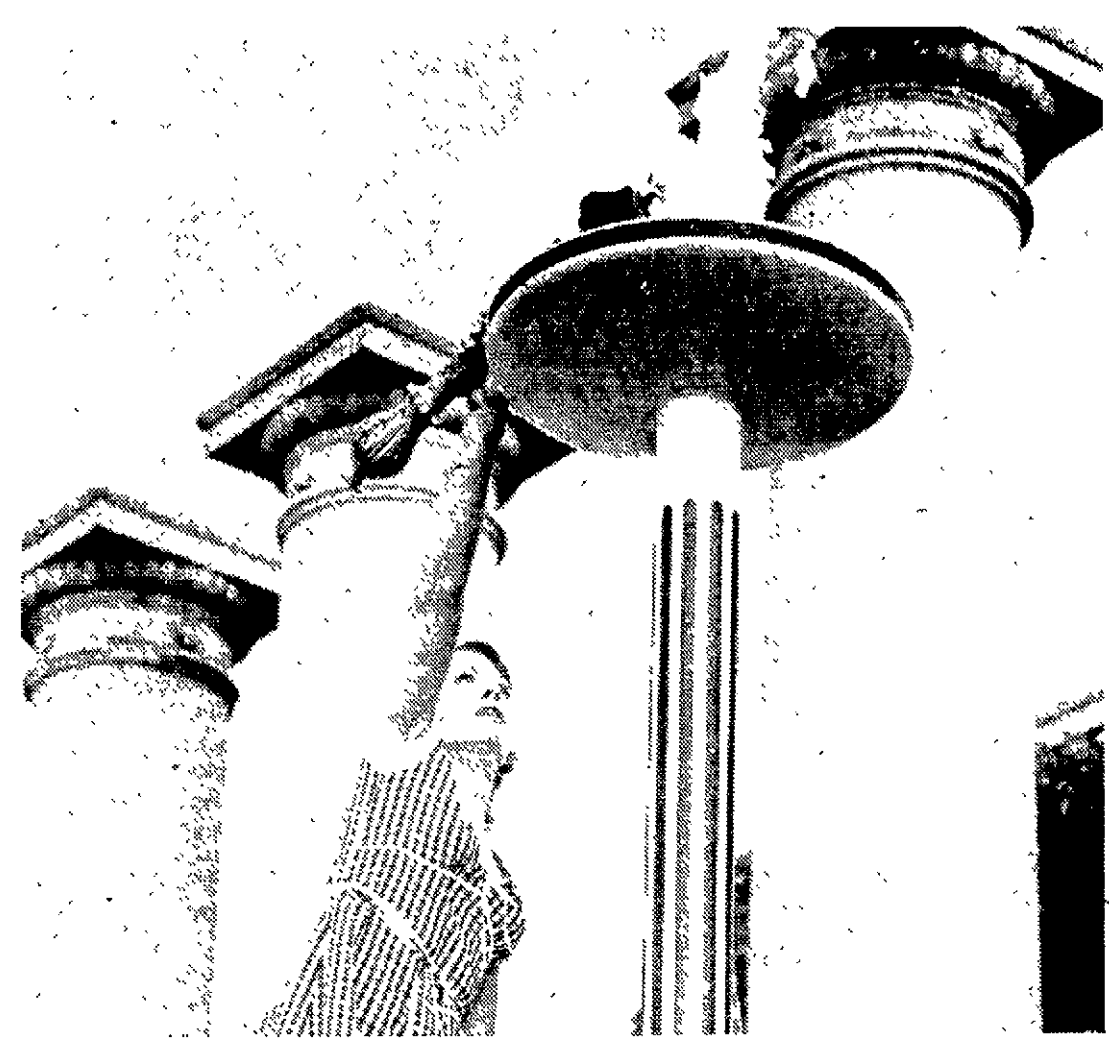

By that time, Ford was well into his first day's business at the White House Nixon surrendered. He summoned ambassadors from 59 nations, sent message to foreign ministers around the world, to assure them that U.S. foreign policy remains basically unchanged.

Ford arranged to address a joint session of House and Senate at 8 p.m. CDT Monday.

He appointed Jerald F. terHorst, a veteran Washington newsman and career-long friend, to be White House press secretary.

TerHorst said the new President considers the selection of a new vice president to be of top priority. He said Ford told congressional leaders he hopes to name a nominee within a week or 10 days.

The selection will be subject to congressional approval, repeating the constitutional process that made Ford vice president eight months ago.

A lot of time and effort went into making Friday night's opening ceremonies of the National AAU Junior Olympics Multisport Championships an impressive show at Nebraska's Ed Weir Track.

Now, the competition is ready to begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at the NU campus and Woods Park for the more than 1,600 entrants.

Gerry Dolson, chairman of the Lincoln Jaycees' opening ceremonies committee, has worked with 20 other Jaycees since last November putting the program together.

Opening Was Challenge

"The opening ceremonies set the tone for the entire event, and it has been a challenge to come up with something good," he said. "We explored all the angles so we could give the kids something they can remember."

The pre-ceremonial entertainment included a concert by the nationally renowned Papillion High School band, a choral concert by the East High Swing Choir, and a trampoline exhibition.

The actual ceremony began with Junior Olympics Queen Amy Campbell of Lincoln and her court of princesses leading the parade of contestants onto the field.

Vocalist John Barnstetter led the athletes and spectators in singing the National Anthem to open the program.

Gold Medalist Speaks

Bob Devaney, University of Nebraska athletic director and master of ceremonies, introduced Mike Burton, Olympic gold medalist in the 1,500-meter freestyle at Munich in 1972, who administered the Olympic oath to the participants.

Welcoming remarks came from Miss Campbell, Lt. Governor Frank Marsh, Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, Donald R. Jones, director of youth activities for Chevrolet (co-sponsoring organization), and AAU president David Rivenes.

Princess Petty Liddick of Lincoln, an athlete in the meet, accepted the torch from Larry Gilliland and Perry Krogmeier of the South Lincoln Track Club and then climbed the stairs to light the Olympic flame.

The athletes earned the right to compete here in regional meets conducted by 14 AAU organizations throughout the nation.

The schedule:

Track and field at Ed Weir Track, 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Swimming at Woods Park Pool, Saturday through Monday, preliminaries 10 a.m., finals 6:30 p.m.

Diving at Woods Park Pool, Saturday and Sunday, preliminaries 10 a.m., finals 3:30 p.m.

Judo at Women's Physical Education Building, 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Synchronized Swimming at Women's PE Building, Saturday and Sunday, 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Wrestling at Coliseum, Saturday and Sunday, 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Trampoline at Women's PE Building, 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Kremlin Assures People Detente To Remain

©The New York Times

Moscow — Assured by the Kremlin that detente will not collapse just because one American personality is gone, the Soviet masses learned Friday with apparent equanimity of President Nixon's resignation.

For the first time since the Watergate scandal came to light, Nixon's finally vain struggle to stay in office was accorded front-page treatment in the Soviet press Friday. Soviet radio broadcast frequent bulletins from the official news agency Tass during the day.

As expected, there was no official Soviet comment on Nixon's resignation. The impression here was that although Soviet leaders are following political developments in the United States with great interest, they do not regard the situation as a crisis in Soviet terms.

According to diplomatic sources, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev intends to continue his summer vacation in the Crimea, and there have been no high level meetings of Soviet Communist Party or government officials to discuss the change in American administration.

According to a Western diplomat, one Soviet official said privately, "It's too bad this has happened. I regret this. At the same time, we must recognize that personalities are not all that important."

"Perhaps we can say that Nixon has made his contribution."

Foreigners Queried

At lower levels of Russian society, reactions varied. Foreigners were often asked if they knew anything about President Ford — how old he was, what he looked like, and so forth.

Soon after Nixon's resignation speech, which began at 4 a.m. Moscow time, Tass urgently inquired of American news agencies whether they happened to have any pictures of Ford.

Very few such pictures appeared to be available anywhere in the Soviet Union. The American embassy had taken down its pictures of Nixon but had no portraits of Ford to replace them.

Most Americans in Moscow were questioned about the situation by Russians, but at the American embassy most of the callers and visitors appeared to be American students and tourists eager for more information about the situation at home.

"Staying in the Soviet Union even for a few days really brings home to you how very little these people are told about anything," a student said.

Commentary Ambiguous

As usual, press commentary here on the subject was indirect and ambiguous.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, took a somewhat truculent tone Friday morning (before the resignation was reported here). An article on detente, without mentioning the imminent departure of Nixon, appeared to be warning his successor not to try to take advantage of the currently improved international climate.

"However furious counterattacks against the advancing forces of peace and socialism may be, they will not be able to arrest the march of history and the social progress of mankind," the article said.

"The fall of anti-communism and the triumph of communism are equally inevitable," it concluded.

But the evening newspaper Izvestia, which is the organ of the Soviet government, appeared to be taking a very different tone.

Poem Featured

The newspaper featured a poem by Yevgeni Yevtyushenko, which, the poet told the New York Times, he had written two days ago when it became apparent that Nixon was about to leave office. The poem was a kind of hymn to permanent friendship between the Soviet and American peoples and death of the cold war.

In an analysis, Izvestia's political commentator, Vikenti Matveev, gave Russian readers their first official Soviet view of Nixon's departure.

He said: "In the development and improvement of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, and the question of detente in general, there is a basis of national support in the U.S.A. that does not depend on membership in the Democratic or Republican Party or some other vacillation in that country's political atmosphere."

The article concluded, in effect, that detente had become irreversible.

Trial Prosecutor Says . . .

Marshals Not Illegal Army

By United Press International

The government attorney in the non-leadership Wounded Knee trial Friday rejected the idea that a special force of U.S. marshals called to duty during last year's occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D. was some kind of illegal army.

Duane Nelson, in his closing arguments, said "it's ridiculous" to consider the unit, formed to deal with the college riots of the early 1970s, as any kind of army at all.

"They are regular U.S. marshals," Nelson said.

The approximate 100-man unit, he said, differed from other U.S. marshals in that they were a specialized unit with the capability of a quick response to a call.

During the first part of closing arguments by defense attorneys for Michael Sturdevant of Neopit, Wis., and Gregorio Jaramillo of Denver, Colo., the "special operations group" was referred to as an "insidious group."

The two men, the first to be tried since non-leadership trials were moved from Sioux Falls, S.D., are charged with impeding federal forces.

The government contends they were arrested as they were trying to get weapons, ammunition and other supplies into Wounded Knee, which was being held by American Indian Movement (AIM) forces.

The penalty the two men face, if convicted, is a fine of up to $10,000 or up to five years in prison or both.

Judge Warren Urbom, barring any last minute problems, has promised a ruling sometime next week.

The defense contends federal forces had no legal right to be on the Pine Ridge reservation and attorney Clyde Heeneey suggested it was the presence of the federal forces that prompted the whole incident.

He said he understood the occupation of Wounded Knee was designed to "peacefully demonstrate to the world the plight of the Indian."

"I know the government did not deliberately attempt to create a disturbance," Heeneey told the court. "But they could have by over-reacting."

However, he said evidence failed to prove for sure who initiated hostilities. But he said one thing was for sure in his opinion.

"I know the government's side was shooting to kill," Heeneey said, which, if the government forces were there illegally, might raise the question of the right of self defense.

Rain Likely Too Late To Revive Corn Crop

Widespread substantial rains spread across parched eastern and central Nebraska Friday, probably a month too late to save the state's dryland corn, according to crop observers.

Heaviest amounts of moisture fell in the southeast and northeast, topped by 2.80 inches at Firth in Lancaster County. Other reports in this county included 2.75 at Roca, 2.50 at Denton, 2.20 at Hickman and 2.00 at both College View and Sprague.

In the northeast where the bulk of Nebraska's dryland corn is grown, Creighton recorded 2.70 inches of rain. Meadow Grove 2.30, Beemer 2.15, Orchard 1.96 and Tekamah 1.94.

Other heavy amounts received in the state included 2.21 inches at Seward, 2.30 at Crete and 1.80 at Kramer.

Most Since May 30

Lincoln's official .93 of an inch, recorded at the airport, was the city's first rainfall in excess of half an inch since May 30 when 1.35 inches fell, according to the National Weather Service.

Due to Friday's rainfall, the City Park Department lifted its ban on fires in Lincoln city parks. The ban had been in effect during the city's long dry period.

Friday's rainfall varied considerably in the Capital City with 2.00 inches in the southeastern section.

A heavy thundershower Friday night in the Scottsbluff area left 1.22 inches at the Scotts Bluff County Airport. That is the greatest 24-hour precipitation recorded at Scottsbluff since 1.68 inches fell last March 10-11, and brings the yearly total there to 6.80 as compared to a normal of 11.15.

Small funnel clouds were spotted Friday night aloft over west and central portions of Cass County, about 10 miles east of Fairbury and near east Lincoln. Apparently none touched the ground, according to the National Weather Service.

Meanwhile, in viewing the crop outlook, Dr. Donald G. Hanway, chairman of the Department of Agronomy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, believes the moisture may benefit Nebraska's sorghum and soybeans "if we get another series of showers in the next week or so".

Possibility Of Crop

"In Nebraska, we could have 100-degree weather or it could stay cool," he commented. "If it doesn't get hot, and if we get some more rain, we could see the sorghum plants initiate some activity with prospects of a fair crop yet."

Dr. Hanway fears it may be too late for some soybean fields by about 10 days.

"It may be past the flowering stage for some soybeans, but we still could get some setting of pods and it will have a beneficial effect on what we will harvest," he stated.

Soil scientists have measured cracks as deep as 30 inches with some estimated to run up to 60 inches, Dr. Hanway noted.

Underground Erosion

"These cracks could hold up to six inches of rain," he estimated. "There is a possibility of erosion underground, with caving in of the soil under these conditions."

Dryland corn for grain is beyond help at this point, the UNL crop expert said. However, he feels that farmers make silage out of corn would be well advised to wait a while if the plants are still green.

"You will get some uptake of plant food with resultant increase in feed value in terms of increased dry matter, produced by the plant as a result of the rain," Dr. Hanway added.

Northeast Nebraska county agents noted the value of the rainfall, even if the moisture came too late for the corn.

Marlin C. Low, Madison County agent, said the rains were "a blessing for livestock producers who were desperate for forage." Benefits of the rains will be greater if the state has a late fall.

Crop observers also pointed out the value of the moisture for farmers who will soon be seeding winter wheat.

the moisture may benefit Nebraska's sorghum and soybeans "if we get another series of showers in the next week or so."

Possibility Of Crop

"In Nebraska, we could have 100-degree weather or it could stay cool," he commented. "If it doesn't get hot, and if we get some more rain, we could see the sorghum plants initiate some activity with prospects of a fair crop yet."

Dr. Hanway fears it may be too late for some soybean fields by about 10 days.

"It may be past the flowering stage for some soybeans, but we still could get some setting of pods and it will have a beneficial effect on what we will harvest," he stated.

Soil scientists have measured cracks as deep as 30 inches with some estimated to run up to 60 inches, Dr. Hanway noted.

Underground Erosion

"These cracks could hold up to six inches of rain," he estimated. "There is a possibility of erosion underground, with caving in of the soil under these conditions."

Dryland corn for grain is beyond help at this point, the UNL crop expert said. However, he feels that farmers make silage out of corn would be well advised to wait a while if the plants are still green.

"You will get some uptake of plant food with resultant increase in feed value in terms of increased dry matter, produced by the plant as a result of the rain," Dr. Hanway added.

Northeast Nebraska county agents noted the value of the rainfall, even if the moisture came too late for the corn.

Marlin C. Low, Madison County agent, said the rains were "a blessing for livestock producers who were desperate for forage." Benefits of the rains will be greater if the state has a late fall.

Crop observers also pointed out the value of the moisture for farmers who will soon be seeding winter wheat.

Nixon Given Rousing Welcome On Return To California

EX-PRESIDENT . . . stretches out his arms and turns his face to the warm California sun.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon was given a rousing welcome by about 4,000 persons when he returned home from Washington Friday as a private citizen. He vowed to continue working for world peace.

"Having completed one task does not mean that I am going to sit in this marvelous California sunshine and do nothing," the former president told the enthusiastic crowd at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, where he and his family landed in the presidential jet.

Nixon was smiling broadly as he talked to the placard-waving, cheering crowd before getting in a Marine helicopter and flying to his San Clemente estate.

"Over the next two years," Nixon said, "I can assure you that in all the time that I have that can be useful I am going to continue to work for peace on all bases" and for "the opportunity for understanding among all people in America."

Some in the crowd sang "God Bless America," while others shouted, "hip, hip hooray" and "we want Nixon." The radiant homecoming was in contrast to a tearful farewell to his staff earlier in the morning as Nixon left the White House. Then, Nixon said greatness comes not in hours of triumph but in times of knocks, disappointment, sadness.

"Only if you've been in the deepest valley can you ever know how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain," Nixon said as the clock ran out on his 5½ years in the White House. Nixon was over mid-America — central Missouri — at 11:03 a.m. CDT when President Ford raised his hand for the oath.

The formal side of relinquishing the position was a one-sentence letter to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. "Dear Mr. Secretary," it said, "I hereby resign the office of President of the United States. Sincerely, Richard M. Nixon."

At El Toro, Nixon stressed his hope for peace.

"The greatest privilege Pat and I have had is to have visited nearly every country in the world and you know the people there aren't much different than you or I — they all have the same dream, the dream of peace," he said.

About 200 friends greeted Nixon, his wife and their daughter and son-in-law, Tricia and Edward Cox, at the helipad outside his villa here — which no longer will be called the Western White House.

The Nixons went to their home alone.

The final trip was made in Air Force One, the official presidential plane that Nixon renamed "The Spirit of 76."

To his co-workers at the White House, Nixon said that when things go wrong, when a man suffers defeat, some think that all is ended.

"Not true," he said. "It's only a beginning always. The young must know it, the old must know it. They must always sustain it because the greatness comes not when things go always good for you, but the greatness comes when you really take your knocks."

Nixon said "we leave with high hopes, in good spirits and deep humility."

His face, and that of his daughters and their husbands who flanked him during his 20 minute valedictory, mirrored sadness. Tears came to Nixon's eyes as they did to many in the audience.

His last gesture on boarding both aircraft was arms outstretched high in a victory sign. Nixon told his associates he was proud of each of them.

"As I pointed out last night, sure, we've done some things wrong in this administration and the top man always takes the responsibility. I've never ducked it."

"But I want to say one thing — no man or no woman came into this administration and left it with more of the world's goods than when he came in. No man or no woman ever profited at the public expense or the public till."

Nixon made an oblique reference to the Watergate scandal that dogged his administration for nearly two years, building to the point where his choice was congressional removal from office or resignation.

"Mistakes, yes," Nixon said in an oblique reference to the scandal. "But for personal gain, never."

Nixon said he wished he were a wealthy man so he could reward those who served him. But, he said wryly, "at the present time I've got to find a way to pay my taxes."

Ehrlichman Suspended

Olympia, Wash. (AP) — The State Supreme Court Friday ordered former presidential assistant John Ehrlichman suspended from practicing law.

The order, signed by Chief Justice Frank Hale, suspended Ehrlichman pending final disciplinary proceedings against him by the Washington State Bar Association.

The brief order said the suspension was the result of action by the state bar association.

St. Clair Leaves Nixon's Employ

Washington (AP) — James D. St. Clair said Friday he is no longer Richard M. Nixon's chief attorney in handling legal problems related to the Watergate scandal.

St. Clair, who reportedly was dismayed to learn last week that Nixon had withheld relevant Watergate evidence from him for many months, said his association with Nixon had ended and he would fly to his home city of Boston later in the day.

Connally Enters Plea Of Innocent

Washington (AP) — John B. Connally pleaded innocent Friday to charges of bribery, conspiracy and perjury in the milk-fund affair.

Connally, former secretary of the treasury in the Nixon administration, arrived 19 minutes early for the pleading. His wife, Idanell, was present.

Promptly at 11 a.m., Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr. began the proceeding. He asked Connally if he had read the five-count indictment and if he intended to plead not guilty.

"Yes, Your Honor, I do," the gray-haired former Texas governor said in a loud voice.

Connally is charged with accepting two $5,000 payments from Associated Milk Producers Inc., a Texas-based dairy-farmer cooperative that is the nation's largest, in return for helping persuade President Nixon to hike milk price supports in 1971.

World Leaders Hope Ford Continues Nixon Foreign Policy

By The Associated Press

World leaders welcomed Gerald R. Ford as the new president of the United States on Friday and expressed hope that American foreign policy would continue as it did under Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The resignation of Richard M. Nixon was seen with some regret, especially by those who saw the Nixon era as one of great progress in international relations.

But everywhere there were expressions of respect for the vitality of the American system and its ability to purge itself in circumstances that in many countries would either go uncorrected or bring on catastrophe.

In Washington ambassadors of 59 nations were summoned to the White House where Kissinger assured them that American foreign policy would basically remain the same.

Danish Prime Minister Paul Harting summed up much of European reaction, saying he welcomed Nixon's resignation as a "great day for America, a great day for democracy," but noting: "We watched these epoch-making developments with satisfaction and consent, and they should not be forgotten on the day when Nixon resigns."

In the Middle East, both Arabs and Israelis expressed high regard for Nixon, who they considered a friend and supporter. Egyptian newspapers carried stories of his resignation under black banners, a usual sign of mourning.

But the region breathed a collective sigh of relief that Kissinger, roving architect of Middle East peace, would continue as secretary of state. "If Kissinger was resigning, it would be an earthquake," one Israeli official said.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres called the change in government leadership a "victory for a free country" but he said he expects Washington to continue to "show sympathy" for Israel's security needs — needs which he said Nixon understood.

Former Israeli Premier Golda Meir said that in Nixon's "difficult hour," she wanted him to know that his military support for Israel will never be forgotten.

Arab diplomats said the resignation may slow down but will not seriously hamper efforts to settle the Middle East crisis.

The Soviet Union reported Nixon's resignation but emphasized Ford's pledge to continue his predecessor's foreign policy, including the search for a broadened detente that brought Nixon and Kissinger to Moscow only 45 days ago.

Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, played down the change of American presidents, saying detente does not depend on personalities but on the long-range interests of both countries.

"On the question of detente in general there is a basis of national support in the United States that does not depend on membership in the Democratic or Republican party, or other vacillations in that country's political atmosphere," Izvestia said.

NATO officials said privately they hoped Ford would inject the coherence and decisiveness into the Atlantic alliance they said was lacking under a beleaguered Nixon.

In the Far East, government leaders said they hoped for and expected little change in American foreign policy. In South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu put his country on military alert, warning that the Communists would seek to take advantage of the American change in government to launch a general offensive.

China reported without comment the change in the American presidency.

In a Peking broadcast monitored in Tokyo, Hsinhua, the official government news agency, said Nixon had noted in his address, "We have unlocked the doors that for a quarter of a century stood between the United States and the People's Republic of China."

The Cuban Communist party newspaper Granma published a 2,000-word editorial that attacked Nixon as a "personal enemy of Cuba and its revolution." But neither the paper nor Premier Fidel Castro said anything about President Ford or the future of U.S.-Cuban relations.

Some observers said the lack of comment meant Cuba was leaving the door open for possible future contact between the two nations.

In Stockholm, Sweden, Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Roa said Nixon was "totally bankrupt" politically and morally, and "he was left with three choices: to resign, to face trial or to take his life."

In Poland, Warsaw radio said the Watergate affair was "blown up to huge dimensions" by Americans who opposed East-West detente. "But fortunately they have not prevailed," the radio said, saying Ford appears to be "firmly committed to continuing this policy of detente."

The president of oil-rich Venezuela, Carlos Andres Perez, pointed to the Watergate scandal and called on officials and citizens in his country to "combat corruption."

In Ottawa, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau congratulated Ford and expressed confidence that he and the new president could continue to improve U.S.-Canadian relations.

New York Times News Summary

Prospects In Doubt

Washington — Richard Nixon's prospects for escaping prosecution in the Watergate case remained in doubt. He lost what immunity he may have had from prosecution when he resigned, and the office of the special Watergate prosecutor said a decision on whether to prosecute him has not been made. The new White House press secretary, Jerry terHorst, said President Ford was not likely to grant a pardon to Nixon. He recalled that last fall Ford, at his Senate confirmation hearings on his nomination as vice president, said the public probably would not "stand for" such a pardon.

Disposition Questioned

Washington — The disposition and even ownership of the enormous amount of presidential records left behind by Richard Nixon in the White House and the National Archives, some of which could be used as evidence in the forthcoming Watergate trials, was a recurring question in Washington. Some members of Congress urged impoundment of the documents, and others demanded the Watergate investigation be continued.

Peace Talks Slow

Geneva — The three-power Cyprus peace talks in Geneva seem unlikely to reach a fundamental agreement soon. After two days of talks, the foreign ministers of Greece, Turkey and Britain had not even begun to discuss the basic political problems underlying the fighting that has continued beyond the cease-fire agreement of July 30. They recessed until 10 a.m. Saturday.

Cease-Fire Line Set

Nicosia, Cyprus — The military delegates of Turkey, Greece and Britain agreed here on a technical report, which established the basis for a cease-fire demarcation line in Cyprus.

Instigator Broke

Washington (Star-News) — Frank Wills, the $80-a-week security guard whose spotting of a piece of electrical tape on the latch of a basement door at the Watergate started the downfall of Richard Nixon, is out of work. He said he was broke as he heard the President resign.

Memoirs Valued

New York — Scott Meredith, a literary agent, said a close associate of Richard M. Nixon, evidently acting on Nixon's behalf, had asked him a month ago how much money Nixon could earn by writing his memoirs. Meredith, whose clients include former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Norman Mailer, the novelist, said he had answered "a minimum of $2 million" but had had no contact with the Nixon associate since then.

TerHorst Says President To 'Govern With Gavel'

DETROIT (AP) — "President Ford will govern the country with a gavel, not a club," newly appointed White House press secretary Gerald F. terHorst said Friday in his final dispatch from Washington as a reporter for the Detroit News.

"The Ford administration will be an open one, much as the man himself during his years in government, hiding neither his successes nor his warts," wrote terHorst, until Thursday the newspaper's Washington bureau chief.

"His intention as President is to be more than ever what he promised Congress — to be a 'peacemaker' for the nation and a 'calm communicator' between the White House and Capitol Hill," he said in the story in Friday's editions.

TerHorst said that among the aides Ford wants to retain in definitely at the White House are Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger and Treasury Secretary William Simon.

TerHorst wrote that it is certain that the new President's choice for vice president will not be a controversial one in Congress.

The former Grand Rapids Press reporter, who covered Ford's first congressional campaign for the paper 25 years ago, said, "Mr. Ford will not usher in a new era of Camelot or the big ranch scene."

"Few will probably acclaim Ford as the brightest intellectual ever to sit behind the desk in the Oval Office, but it may be possible that some will acclaim him as the most decent."

Inflation Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford told his economic advisers Friday that controlling inflation would be the "high and first priority" of his administration.

Ford's first meeting with the advisers, held just two hours after Ford became President, was a "very preliminary discussion" of the nation's economic problems, Ford press spokesmen said.

Ford already was at work Friday lining up economics advisers who will remain during his term.

It was announced he asked Treasury Secretary William E. Simon to remain on a permanent basis and that Simon had accepted.

Ford also reaffirmed the Nixon appointment of economics consultant Alan Greenspan to succeed Herbert Stein as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

There was less certainty about Kenneth Rush, who has served as Nixon's economics counselor.

Ford's First Address 'Magnificent, Superb'

Washington (UPI) — Congressional leaders of both parties Friday praised President Ford's first address to the nation in such terms as "magnificent" and "superb."

"It will undoubtedly bring the country together," said Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott.

"His line about 'openness and candor' should set the tone for all Americans to follow." "Magnificent," Scott commented.

"It was authentic Jerry Ford," Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said. "It was superb. He hit the right notes."

Calling the speech "very moving, from the heart," Mansfield met with Ford later in the White House and assured him that Democrats would go "more than half way in cooperating" with the new administration.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking Republican in the House, said: "After a week of drama and raw emotion he brought me close to tears." He said Ford is a "man who does bring to the office what we need right now... sincerity, conviction... and a rugged determination to hold a steady course."

Rep. John McFall of California, assistant House Democratic leader, called it "a very good speech" which "set the right tone."

Rep. Julia Butler Hansen, D-Wash., said it was "a most eloquent, moving speech; I liked its tone and spirit. He is a decent, fine man."

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn.: "a magnificent speech, a message of hope."

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., who served on the Senate Watergate Committee, pledged his cooperation and expressed hope that "we can close the dark pages of Watergate."

"Although the arrogance of power was the festering ground of our recent tragedy, let's make humility, understanding and cooperation the mortar and brick of a new resolve to put our country together," Montoya said.

Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, one of Nixon's staunchest supporters on Capitol Hill, said Ford would face the task of repairing a government "weakened by the efforts of President Nixon's detractors to drive him from office."

"President Ford can't pick up responsibility at the highest level of success, but must instead repair the damages," Bennett said.

Time For Bigness

Looking to the days ahead, President Gerald Ford remarked prior to his new oath of office that "I have had a good many adversaries in the political arena but I don't think I have a single enemy."

That may not cover the nuts and bolts of things domestic and international but it represents the kind of philosophy from which the nuts and bolts will be fashioned. It says simply that there is a distinction to be made between the reaching of objectives at any and all costs or achieving them within the framework of acceptable norms.

The accepted norms rule out all that has come to be known as Watergate and a few things not even encompassed in that term. We can have a viable and competitive two-party system, but both parties need to keep in mind that they exist for the benefit of the nation and that they are not ends unto themselves.

The parties are a means to an end — the ultimate welfare of the nation. That welfare is found, first, in national security and then in a reasonable standard of living here at home.

There are many opinions on the best way to achieve these things and they should be voiced. It would be wrong to attempt to stifle debate and useless to think that we could eliminate conflict.

But those in public life who proceed with the wrong motivation will tear the nation down. Politicians who are more concerned about re-election than serving the country are unwanted and unneeded.

Parties that look first to their own preservation and success and then to the needs of the country will be sowing the seeds of their ultimate destruction. If men and institutions in public affairs proceed in the belief that what is good for the country is good for them, then the nation will successfully withstand this dark time in its history.

Adversaries can hammer out their differences and come to a constructive conclusion. Enemies can wage war only in one fashion or another until finally there is a winner and a loser.

What we need now is a nation of winners in which all people share in the rewards and hardships of building a lasting and humanitarian civilization.

They Gotta Be Kidding

They gotta be kidding, the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD's guidelines for low-income housing in Lincoln are $108 for a two-bedroom unit, $119 for three bedrooms and $130 for four or more bedrooms.

That is almost laughable. It would be laughable if it were not so serious.

What it means is that, unless the guidelines are changed, the low-income housing program in Lincoln will stagnate. It will never grow from the some 1,100 units now in operation.

Those units will continue on older more realistic guidelines but the rental figures for the future would mean no future at all. And when you say "guidelines," what you really mean is absolute ceilings.

From HUD, a guideline means that's it. The Lincoln Housing Authority cannot use federal funds up to the guideline and then supplement the program with its own money, even if it had the money to do this.

Only the amount of the guideline can be paid.

And the guideline payment includes utilities. Just imagine trying to rent a two, three or four-bedroom place in Lincoln, including utilities, for the figures above. You could hunt for the rest of your life and never find anything. The latest survey in Lincoln shows a need for at least double the present number of low-income units for the city. The Housing Authority reports it has not yet come close to fulfilling the requests that it gets for help in housing.

Perhaps there are those who take philosophical issue with a housing subsidy program. If so, that is surely their right but in our opinion, if the nation fails to consider adequate housing as a basic human need and right, then it has a strange sense of values.

Certainly, HUD should be asked to change its guidelines. If it refuses to do so, the low-income housing program will have been brought, administratively, to a halt. That, in our opinion, is not a proper administrative decision.

They Had A Dream

In 1945, Sidney Poitier auditioned for the American Negro Theater in New York, and his performance was a debacle.

Raised in the Bahamas, he spoke with a heavy West Indian accent which quickly led the director to dismiss him.

But Poitier was determined. He went out and bought a cheap radio, worked on his diction by copying the speech of announcers and then returned for another try. The second time Poitier made the grade and was given acting lessons in exchange for performing chores backstage.

Since that halting beginning, Poitier has steadily climbed into the ranks of the nation's cinema superstars.

He made it to the top in a way no other Negro actor before him ever had — as a dramatic actor in leading roles. Along the way he established a number of milestones.

In 1958, for his role as an escaped convict in "The Defiant Ones," Poitier became the first Negro ever nominated for an Oscar as a leading actor.

In 1965, he won the Oscar as best actor for his portrayal of an itinerant construction worker in "Lilies of the Field." This was the first time the top award had ever gone to a Negro.

In 1967, the nation's theater owners voted Poitier and actress Elizabeth Taylor the biggest money-making stars of the year.

A Gallup Poll that same year found Poitier to be the most popular movie star in America.

He was accorded another honor never before extended to a Negro when he became the 15th screen personality to leave his hand- and footprints in the cement of Grauman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood.

In 1974, an even rarer honor came his way when he was cited for his contributions to the performing arts on Queen Elizabeth's birthday honors list and was named an honorary knight-commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Born in Miami on Feb. 20, 1924, Poitier was the youngest in a family of eight children. His father was a tomato farmer on Cat Island in the Bahamas. As a boy, Poitier worked in the fields, receiving only scanty formal schooling.

When he was 15, Poitier left home and returned to Miami. Then he moved on to New York, arriving with $1.50 in his pockets. He worked as a dishwasher and slept outside on the roof of a building.

When World War II broke out, Poitier enlisted in the Army, serving four years as a physiotherapist in a medical unit.

Discharged in 1945, Poitier held a number of menial jobs before reading a newspaper ad about the American Negro Theater's search for actors.

After being accepted by the group, Poitier alternated in his roles with another struggling newcomer who later became a famous singer — Harry Belafonte.

Poitier appeared on stage in a number of productions before landing his first movie role in a 1950 film, "No Way Out."

He won immediate critical acclaim

Among his other films are "Blackboard Jungle," "Porgy and Bess," "In the Heat of the Night," "To Sir With Love," "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?" and "For Love of Ivy," based on a story by Poitier.

WASHINGTON — Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, the majority leader, has made the wise and constructive suggestion that impeachment proceedings should continue against President Nixon despite his resignation.

Senator Edward Brooke, R-Mass., has meanwhile put forward the sentimental and wrongheaded notion that Congress should pass a resolution urging that Nixon not be brought to trial for any crimes he has committed while in office.

The reaction to Mansfield's idea was generally adverse. The response to Brooke's proposal was much more favorable, though probably not strong enough to get it adopted. The differing reactions to these two suggestions tell much that is both good and bad about American political attitudes and particularly about the moral atmosphere of this capital.

On the good side, the charitable attitude toward Nixon's offenses demonstrates once again that Americans are a generous, amiable people. Our national history has been fortunate; there are no defeated elements in society nursing ancient grudges or old hatreds; our politics, though it has an economic base, is not embittered by the antagonisms of class warfare. Thus it is that Americans are usually ready to forgive and forget.

But some undesirable attitudes also shape this viewpoint. There is the monarchical reverence with which too many Americans regard a president. It is as if, once elected, he partakes of the divine right that kings in earlier times were thought to possess.

Another unhealthy influence is notably present in Washington, D.C. This is a one-industry town where politicians, senior bureaucrats, lobbyists, and newspapermen work and socialize together. Contrary to the argument of some Nixon supporters, it is not true that "they all do it." Most politicians are not corrupt. But it is true that like most people in any industry, they tend to become tolerant of one another's failings.

Washington is also an Horatio Alger town. People here are accustomed to the spectacular rise of previously obscure men who have been elected or appointed to high office. The city vicariously enjoys their ascent, their brief years of power and glory, and then accommodates them as permanent has-beens or forgets them altogether if they depart.

As a result, many people here can identify with the lifestyle of these transient men of power—their sudden increases in rank and salary, their limousines, their hushed offices and deferential secretaries, their smiling faces at cocktail parties every evening, their children attending expensive private schools.

To be deprived suddenly of all that — as the Spiro Agnews were last year and as the Nixons are now to be — to be dropped from every hostess's party list, to be stripped of offices, secretaries and even (oh, precious perquisite!) one's limousine, to have the dream killed prematurely and abruptly — that seems like punishment enough.

But this weird inversion of values, this sloppy sentimentality toward men who have betrayed the public trust has no basis in the Constitution or in the ideal of equality that ought to prevail in a Republic.

A prison term for an impeached president — if his offenses merit a criminal penalty — is clearly what the framers of the Constitution intended. They provided in Article One, Section 3: "Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office . . . but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to law."

Let there be no more dithering about conferring immunity on Nixon for crimes he committed while in office. The special prosecutor should now allow a grand jury to do what the original Watergate grand jury wanted to do last winter, namely, indict Nixon for conspiracy to obstruct justice. Assuming that he is convicted after a trial, Nixon can then be the recipient of a pardon if President Ford wishes to confer one upon him and upon all the other Watergate defendants as well. But clemency must follow conviction not precede it.

The principle of equal justice before the law has already suffered two rude jolts in the cases of Agnew and of former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst. How can judges anywhere in good conscience continue to sentence ordinary men and women to prison if Nixon is also given a "sweetheart" deal?

At the same time, as Senator Mansfield has suggested, let the House and Senate conclude the impeachment proceedings and render a judgment on his "high crimes and misdemeanors." For the future "domestic tranquility" of this Republic, it is essential that Nixon not be allowed to leave office in a manner that leaves either his criminality or his unconstitutional conduct open to any doubt or question — by him, by his supporters, or by sympathetic historians in the distant future. To guard against tomorrow's myth-makers, let the record be clear and irrefutable.

JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — In the long ironic history of America, events have kept unfolding contrary to the expectation of her greatest leaders and thinkers, but seldom has there been such an example of the irony and incongruity of political life as the case of Richard Milhous Nixon.

The journalists have now written his political obituary and passed him on to the historians — who will probably treat him more kindly — but he remains a tragic tangle of contradictions, and will have to be left in the end to the dramatists, novelists, and psychologists.

There is something uncanny about the twists and accidents of this fantastic story, which may even baffle the mystery writers: the piece of tell-tale white tape placed the wrong way on the Watergate doors; the almost accidental discovery, in a throw-away question by a minor attorney, that the rooms had been bugged and the conversations recorded; the sudden appearance of two superb young reporters on the Washington Post; the appointment of two stern judges — Sirica and Gesell — to hear the case; and the astonishing decision to raise, launder, and conceal campaign funds that were not really needed.

Constantly, the President and his men almost seemed to create the things they feared the most, by assuming the worst in everybody. Nixon's intent all along, he has explained, was to protect and strengthen the presidency, but the result was to weaken it and revive the confidence and authority of Congress.

He set an electronic trap to gather evidence for the prosecution of his

The Ironic Twists Of History

"Perhaps the greatest irony of all is that the nation has come out of this nightmare reasonably united. By his tragic blunders and lonely conspiracies, Nixon has finally kept his promise to the little girl with the sign in Ohio. He has 'brought us together,' not for his leadership and his tactics but against them."

enemies, and produced instead evidence for his own impeachment and conviction. He campaigned for the presidency on a platform of law and order, appealing for "a new morality" and the end of "permissiveness," and was brought down by the disorder, lawlessness, and moral squalor of his triumphant team.

He blamed his plight on his political enemies in the press and Congress, and asked the people to trust his own aides or lawyers, and was finally repudiated by most of his own supporters and by a Supreme Court that included four of his own appointees.

There seems no end to the irony of this drama, and so many odd and unexpected revelations and punishments have come about that it almost sustains the moral interpretation of history. The men who gave their loyalty to him rather than to their oath of office, hoping for personal success through their association with his power, were destroyed in the process — and they will never be the same even if he pardons them.

Even the man he admired the most and hoped might succeed him in the White House, John Connally of Texas, finds himself in the ironical position of being abandoned by his old friends in the Democratic Party, rejected by his new colleagues in the Republican Party, and under indictment in the courts.

In his first inaugural address, Nixon said that perhaps the greatest crisis he faced upon taking office was "a crisis of the spirit" in America. And after he had won a second term by the largest margin in the history of the presidency, his administration summed up its achievement of the past:

"Perhaps his greatest achievement," the administration said of Nixon, "was his success in helping the nation find an 'answer of the spirit' within itself. In the past four years, a new sense of calm and confidence has begun to grow up in America. A nation that had grown skeptical, accustomed to promises which outran reality, has been learning to trust its institutions again . . . a nation that had become divided, with a waning sense of common purpose, has begun to pull itself back together . . ."

John Ehrlichman made this theme more specific on Sept. 7, 1972. "After the history of this first term is written and you look back," he said, "you're going to see that, compared to other administrations or by any other standard you'd want to apply, that it has been an extraordinarily clean, corruption-free administration, because the President insists on that."

Nevertheless, perhaps the greatest irony of all is that the nation has come out of this nightmare reasonably united. By his tragic blunders, and lonely conspiracies, Nixon has finally kept his promise to the little girl with the sign in Ohio. He has "brought us together," not for his leadership and his tactics but against them.

It has been a terrible time, and but for this extraordinary combination of accidental disclosures, it might have been much worse, but the long agony has not been without its advantages. It took a civil war to get rid of slavery, two apocalyptic world wars to put American power behind peace and order in the world, a wasting economic depression to reform the social structure of America, and Vietnam and Watergate to bring excessive presidential power until control.

There will be reforms now that will reform campaign financing, protect the privacy of our people, control the presumptions and power of White House officials, and bring the public's business more into the open. Nothing has been solved, but everything has been changed in subtle ways, and for the better. The tragedy has been Nixon, and the essence of the tragedy is that he was not faithful to his better instincts, or even to his trusting friends.

Two More On Scoreboard

Lincoln, Neb.

Chalk another one (make that two) up for the cops. Huntsville, Texas; Saturday night; two hostages along with two escaped convicts shot to death by police. No, not by the criminals, by police . . . again.

It seems that the only ones hostages have to worry about any more are the trigger-happy cops.

They (the cops) didn't use pepper gas or tear gas. They didn't shoot the tires of the waiting escape vehicle. They shot into the group and now two of the volunteer hostages are dead. I guess "incompetent" is the least one could say about these policemen.

Use Of Pennants On Cycles

Lincoln, Neb.

I think it would be a good idea to require by law that all bicycles and motorcycles carry a pennant on a staff on the handlebars, such as many of them now carry. In heavy traffic the two-wheeled vehicles are often hidden by large vehicles. Besides, trucks, vans and larger pickups with their high engine hoods will often mask even a large motorcycle. The pennant should be higher than a van roof.

I am sure it would aid those of us in ordinary autos to see and stay out of the way of these two-wheeled vehicles whose riders are so vulnerable to even the slightest collision with an auto. I do not like to add to our laws, but I believe in this case the merits are great and the cost and inconvenience are small.

Citizen's Arrest Called For

Lincoln, Neb.

This is in response to The Star editorial of last week praising the finding of a loophole in the no-smoking-in-certain-areas law. It was stated that it is a bad law because it infringes upon personal freedoms and that it is unenforceable.

I have always understood that one person's rights and personal freedoms end when they infringe upon someone else's. As a non-smoker, cigarettes, cigars and pipes are not only distasteful to me, but they also damage my lungs, as shown by a number of scientific studies. So the question is, what gives the smoker the right to damage my lungs, as a non-smoker?

As for the enforcement, I think most smokers will show enough consideration to refrain from smoking in the restricted areas. As for those who persist in smoking in those areas, the non-smoker should be able to make a citizen's arrest.

Too many Americans have hang-ups. As Loren Eiseley stated: "We go forth like Mad-Hatters without any constructive direction, lacking purpose." For instance, among our ills, inflation has become one of our worst bugaboos, with a host of others, among them failure to use any judgment about certain politicians.

Too many would-be economists along with politicians believe inflation can be self-adjusted. It might be if those possessed with coin of the realm would resist the impulse to spend, spend and spend. They want the best of everything — costly living, palaces, the most expensive automobiles, extravagant purchases along with ostentatious entertainment. A certain class believe themselves the upper-crust of society that is nothing other than pretentiousness. It is all contrary to our heritage.

A modicum of common sense, sensible wants and desires would lessen the ills of mankind, especially Americans.

Why can't we "live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man"?

Paging Doctor Welby

Lincoln, Neb.

While the cost of medicine has gone up, the quality has gone down. Imagine a $10 bill for two or three minutes of a doctor's time. You're rushed in through the assembly line from an aide who takes your vital signs to a doctor who quickly looks you over and writes out a prescription for pain-relieving tablets. No attempt seems to be made at getting to the cause of pain. Obviously that would cost you much more.

What is even sadder is that chances are you don't really know the doctor you call yours. You probably found his or her name in a phone book. Nevertheless, there's no time to be personal. Today's mass production doesn't let doctors make house calls.

No wonder Marcus Welby may be considered by some to be America's family doctor. To some extent, he's filling a void that doctors used to fill. He makes a house call one hour each week. In return, you sit through commercials.

Not a bad deal, but somehow that's a poor fantasy substitution for the real thing.

Time For Bigness

Looking to the days ahead, President Gerald Ford remarked prior to his new oath of office that "I have had a good many adversaries in the political arena but I don't think I have a single enemy."

That may not cover the nuts or bolts of things domestic and international but it represents the kind of philosophy from which the nuts and bolts will be fashioned. It says simply that there is a distinction to be made between the reaching of objectives at any and all costs or achieving them within the framework of acceptable norms.

The accepted norms rule out all that has come to be known as Watergate and a few things not even encompassed in that term. We can have a viable and competitive two-party system, but both parties need to keep in mind that they exist for the benefit of the nation and that they are not ends unto themselves.

The parties are a means to an end — the ultimate welfare of the nation. That welfare is found, first, in national security and then in a reasonable standard of living here at home.

There are many opinions on the best way to achieve these things and they should be voiced. It would be wrong to attempt to stifle debate and useless to think that we could eliminate conflict.

But those in public life who proceed with the wrong motivation will tear the nation down. Politicians who are more concerned about re-election than serving the country are unwanted and unneeded.

Parties that look first to their own preservation and success and then to the needs of the country will be sowing the seeds of their ultimate destruction. If men and institutions in public affairs proceed in the belief that what is good for the country is good for them, then the nation will successfully withstand this dark time in its history.

Adversaries can hammer out their differences and come to a constructive conclusion. Enemies can wage war only in one fashion or another until finally there is a winner and a loser.

What we need now is a nation of winners in which all people share in the rewards and hardships of building a lasting and humanitarian civilization.

The men who gave their loyalty to him rather than to their oath of office, hoping for personal success through their association with his power, were destroyed in the process — and they will never be the same even if he pardons them.

Even the man he admired the most and hoped might succeed him in the White House, John Connally of Texas, finds himself in the ironical position of being abandoned by his old friends in the Democratic Party, rejected by his new colleagues in the Republican Party, and under indictment in the courts.

In his first inaugural address, Nixon said that perhaps the greatest crisis he faced upon taking office was "a crisis of the spirit" in America. And after he had won a second term by the largest margin in the history of the presidency, his administration summed up its achievement of the past:

"Perhaps his greatest achievement," the administration said of Nixon, "was his success in helping the nation find an 'answer of the spirit' within itself. In the past four years, a new sense of calm and confidence has begun to grow up in America. A nation that had grown skeptical, accustomed to promises which outran reality, has been learning to trust its institutions again . . . a nation that had become divided, with a waning sense of common purpose, has begun to pull itself back together . . ."

John Ehrlichman made this theme more specific on Sept. 7, 1972. "After the history of this first term is written and you look back," he said, "you're going to see that, compared to other administrations or by any other standard you'd want to apply, that it has been an extraordinarily clean, corruption-free administration, because the President insists on that."

Nevertheless, perhaps the greatest irony of all is that the nation has come out of this nightmare reasonably united. By his tragic blunders, and lonely conspiracies, Nixon has finally kept his promise to the little girl with the sign in Ohio. He has "brought us together," not for his leadership and his tactics but against them.

It has been a terrible time, and but for this extraordinary combination of accidental disclosures, it might have been much worse, but the long agony has not been without its advantages. It took a civil war to get rid of slavery, two apocalyptic world wars to put American power behind peace and order in the world, a wasting economic depression to reform the social structure of America, and Vietnam and Watergate to bring excessive presidential power until control.

There will be reforms now that will reform campaign financing, protect the privacy of our people, control the presumptions and power of White House officials, and bring the public's business more into the open. Nothing has been solved, but everything has been changed in subtle ways, and for the better. The tragedy has been Nixon, and the essence of the tragedy is that he was not faithful to his better instincts, or even to his trusting friends.

Pottery, Earth Lodges Found At Indian Cave

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Barada — Yep, there once were Indians at Indian Cave State Park.

Not that substantiation actually was needed beyond the drawings in the park's cave namesake. However, two earth lodges have been discovered which are of enough interest to bring two archeologists scurrying.

In fact, said Park Supt. Larry Cook, the pair arrived at the site "the very day after I called them." He had come across several pieces of pottery which were uncovered by heavy machinery grading for a new park roadway.

Two Weeks Digging
Assisted by a summer youth program crew, Nebraska State Historical Society archeologists Terry Steinacher and Gayle Carlson spent more than two weeks digging the first find. Among its yield were more broken pottery, stone tool pieces, a fireplace pit and the charred remains of numerous support posts.

Located near a spring about a mile west of the Missouri River, the lodge measured about 37 feet square. It's believed to be of the 1150-1350 A.D. period when a prehistoric Indian culture is known to have frequented the Missouri River bluffs.

"These particular Indians were probably the first people to intensively farm eastern Nebraska," said Steinacher, whose duties include being highway salvage archeologist for the Nebraska Department of Roads. "They apparently drifted off toward what is now South Dakota about 1400 to 1500. It is thought they left because of a drought which was a problem even in that era."

Post Set Perfectly
It appears that up to 20 people lived at the site just investigated, according to the archeologists. Interestingly, the lodge posts had been set almost perfectly in a north-south, east-west pattern.

The possibility of reconstructing at least one of the lodges for an interpretive center is under consideration, said Cook. Any such development would be the first in this state.

Incidentally, the sites are not now accessible to the public because of the 12½-mile road construction project. This summer park use is limited to hikers and backpackers.

Cave Is Buried
Whether the lodge inhabitants were of the same culture as the Indians who made some of the cave markings is open to conjecture. For six years the cave has been largely buried under tons of dirt.

A landowner, peeved at condemnation proceedings which would take the cave and other acreage from him, had bulldozed the site. He insisted the drawings on the cave walls had eroded away many years before. Photographs exist of the markings, but they reportedly were made some 50 years or so ago.

Authorities Charge Teen With Robbery

Papillon (UPI) — A 19-year-old Gretna youth was charged Friday with robbing the Gretna State Drive-In Bank at Gretna Thursday.

Deputy Sarpy County Atty. Chris Arps filed the charge against Jonathan L. Lewis, who was arrested about 90 minutes after the robbery near the village of Louisville.

Louisville Police Chief Tom Frudiker said the youth drove up to his cruiser and stopped. He got out of the car and surrendered as though "he wanted to get it over with," Frudiker said.

An airplane and helicopter had been pressed into the search, which included officers from Sarpy County, the State Patrol, and the FBI.

The $1,312 taken in the robbery was recovered, Sheriff Patrick Thomas said.

Mrs. Nita Leehy, teller at the bank, said the holdup man drove up to the window and put a folded lunch sack and a note in the money drawer. The note demanded money, and Mrs. Leehy, who was alone in the bank, complied.

2 Scottsbluff Motorcyclists Die In Crash

Sturgis, S.D. (AP) — The state Highway Safety Division said Daniel J. Hoban, 24, and Peggy Waltman, 20, both of Scottsbluff, Neb., were killed Thursday when the motorcycle they were riding collided with a vehicle west of Sturgis.

Investigating officers said the accident happened on U.S. 14A, four miles west of Sturgis, and was probably caused by a wet road.

The officers said the motorcycle operated by Hoban apparently went out of control on a curve and slid under an oncoming utility vehicle driven by Charles Moskowicz of Mt. Pleasant, Mich.

Officials said Moskowicz was towing a trailer at the time of the mishap, and that both Hoban and Miss Waltman, Hoban's passenger, were killed instantly.

Woman Suspect In Murdering Of Omaha Man

Omaha (AP) — A woman was being held in connection with the death of an Omaha man who was shot Thursday night.

And charges are being studied in the shotgun death of a 16-year-old Omaha youth.

He was David Joseph White. Police said he and several other young persons were being shown a 16-gauge shotgun at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Burghardt when the gun discharged. Burghardt said he did not know the gun was loaded.

A woman suspect was arrested several hours after McArthur Coleman, 25, died of two bullet wounds to the heart. Police said he was in his front yard when a woman walked up and shot him with a handgun.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalm 2 and Act 4:25

Several friends have suggested that we change the title or text of this column, and made good suggestions for another. However, the further we go along the more appropriate we think the above one is. It not only fits any situation that arises, but also taken with its context explains it, giving causes, warnings of judgement and curse, and pointing the way to blessing and safety.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" is the opening words of the Second Psalm of God's Book, The Bible. God asks this question. God answers this question. Believe it or not, this is the God you will have to meet and give account of the deeds done in the flesh when your spirit leaves the body and returns to God who gave it. "The heart in your bosom is a 'muffled drum' beating a march for you to the cemetery," and to the appointment the Almighty has made for you to appear before His judgement seat! God commands His people and witnesses to warn men "PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD—WHETHER ANY HEAR, OR ANY FORBEAR." Webster says a heathen is "one who does not believe in the God of the Bible," and this fits in with what God Himself says in this Psalm: "People who imagine a 'vain thing, kings and rulers who set themselves against God, His King, His Government and His Ten Commandments." The results of this rebellion is God's laughter, God's derision, God speaking in wrath, and God vexing mankind in His sore displeasure. But in mercy God informs the heathen He has set up His King upon the holy hill Zion, and calls the kings of the earth to be vassals, the judges of the earth to be instructed and "SERVE THE LORD WITH FEAR, LEAVE HIM BE ANGRY, AND HE PERISH FROM THE WAY. WHY HIS WRATH IS KINDLED BUT A LITTLE, BLESSED ARE ALL THEY WHICH PUT THEIR TRUST IN HIM."

We cannot hear God laugh. We can with the "eye of faith" see evidence of His Derision, and the vexations He sends or permits to come upon man; and with the "ear of faith" we can hear Him speak in wrath! We think God "spoke in wrath" to this whole nation in commanding or permitting President Kennedy to be suddenly cut off, and this Providential Act was a rebuke to the nation for departing from the "faith and foundations of our founding fathers." Since the tragedy we have continued traveling away from these land-marks. Your time is ahead to be cut off, and so in mine! Have you, are you "Preparing to meet God?" Or does pride and presumption cause you to feel you are already "just right?"

Above, the statement was made that the title "WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" fits any situation that may arise, explains it, giving causes, warnings of the curse and judgement, but pointing the way to blessing and safety. In the following we try to illustrate this by making application of it to the problem of segregation and integration, matters causing no little vexation to our nation, and in the world.

"The God of The Bible" instituted segregation in order to break up the integration He found going on when He visited the Tower of Babel—11th chapter of Genesis. He destroyed the Tower. The purpose of the destruction, confounding of languages, scattering and segregating the people into races, was to restrain the evil imaginations of men. In time this Act of God resulted in some of the earth's people being white, some black, some yellow, and others red, and the fixing of the bounds of their habitations—Acts 17:26. Mixed breeds, amalgamation, and mongrelization were the outcome of disobedience, "mordant affection," lust, fornication, and the law of God that "Whosoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

An irrefutable fact that segregation is the Will of God, and He is the author, is found in the history of the Jewish people down to the present hour. In the Providence of God integration for the flesh is not intended for this earthly life, though it has often come about in instances as the result of sin and disobedience. In the Providence of God integration for Spiritual life is intended by God for all who have been born by The Spirit of God into the Kingdom of God. Witness these words of Christ: "THE KINGDOM OF GOD COMETH NOT WITH OBSERVATION. NEITHER SHALL THEY SAY, LO HERE! OR, LO THERE: FOR BEHOLD THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU." Luke 17:20, 21.

Our title, taken in its entire Scriptural context, reveals the cause for segregation in the fleshly life (man is the Providence of God. It warns of God's laughter, derision, wrath, and the visitations of vexations to those who reject and resist His Acts and Providences. But it also urges and invites the people, kings, rulers, and judges of the earth to be wise, and he instructed, submit to God's King and ways, and receive the blessing of God.

"Consider the strife, ill-will, blood-shed, and what might be called, 'ordered confusion,' that has resulted since the 1954 decision of our Supreme Court calling for integration and rejecting the Acts and Providences of God Almighty. Are we not 'fighting against God' and His Providence, ordained to restrain the evil imagination of men? Nearly every time we note in the papers the demands for more and faster integration, the thought occurs: 'On we go fighting against God Almighty, His Acts, and His Providences.'"

So, we submit our title "WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" TAKEN IN ITS CONTEXT, EXPLAINS AND GIVES THE CAUSES OF THE VEXATIONS OF SEGREGATION AND INTEGRATION, WARNS OF THE CURSE AND WRATH OF GOD AHEAD, BUT URGES THE PEOPLE, KINGS, RULERS, AND JUDGES TO BE INSTRUCTED TO TURN TO GOD AND HIS CHRIST AND BE "THAT BLESSED PEOPLE WHOSE GOD IS THE LORD."

It is also applicable to the crime problem, juvenile problem, problems of immorality and incest, the death penalty problem, etc., etc. However, THIS SAYS THE LORD: IF YE WILL NOT BELIEVE, YE SHALL NOT BE ESTABLISHED."

Raah 7:9 The hope of our nation and regeneration is in those who "TRUST AND OBEY, FOR THERE IS NO OTHER WAY!"

Crop Loan Determined By Losses

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Star Staff Writer

Farmers Home Administration (FHA) offices across Nebraska are getting geared up to handle federal loans to farmers for crop production losses due to drought and to provide financial assistance to livestock producers under the Emergency Livestock Credit Act.

Kenneth Bowen, state director of FHA, said "loans for crop production losses will be based on the actual loss that occurred. No loan may exceed the actual loss that was sustained by the farmers."

Bowen explained why some local counties were not in a hurry to get their county designated a disaster area. "Loans cannot be made on losses that occur after the secretary of agriculture designates the county eligible for emergency loans. This is why local officials are waiting until the total crop production can be determined before making their recommendations," he said.

Loan Requirements
To be eligible for the crop emergency loan, an applicant must be a citizen of the United States, be an established farmer or rancher who manages his farming or ranching operation, be of good character to carry out the proposed farming or ranching operation, possess legal capacity to contract for the loan and have suffered crop production losses due to the drought.

Applicants do not have to prove they are unable to obtain their credit needs elsewhere as a test of eligibility for the crop emergency loan.

Farmers have to give security for the loan which has an interest rate of 5%.

The emergency livestock loan is quite different from the crop loss loan.

80% Of Loss
FHA will guarantee up to 80% of possible loss on loans made by legally organized lenders to livestock producers.

The law requires the loans be made by banks or other legally organized lenders.

Bowen urged producers to make applications and loan arrangements with lending institutions which will in turn ask FHA for a loan guarantee. The lender will process the application and close the loan plus service the loan.

A borrower can be assisted by a guarantee of up to $250,000, but the loan must be repaid in three years and carries an interest rate determined between the borrower and the lender.

It may be possible to get a two year renewal for the loan.

Bona Fide Farmers
The agency can make the guarantee up to 80% of the loss a lender may incur on loans to bona fide farmers and ranchers who breed, raise, fatten or market beef and dairy cattle, hogs, sheep, goats, chickens and turkeys.

Most of the borrowers income must come from the farming operation, and most of his time must be devoted to it.

Assistance can be extended to a corporation or partnership only when the majority partners are primarily engaged in livestock or poultry production.

FHA offices throughout the state will have information on both the crop and the livestock assistance programs.

Congress Likely To Favor Planning

Warren Fairchild, chairman of the U.S. Water Resources Council, told officials of state, federal and local agencies involved in water resource planning that future projects were likely to receive favorable consideration by Congress.

"We used to be a nation with a food surplus. There was the argument that we didn't need to have irrigation projects and the like because we had too much food. Now we have high food prices, a worldwide need for food and no reserves, so much of the opposition to irrigation projects has dwindled," he said. Fairchild told the group their planning agencies would need to submit alternative plans on projects along with the plan approved at the local level. Such plans might emphasize economic benefits while the alternative plan might emphasize ecological benefits.

Ecological Impact
"Congress and the agencies who make these decisions should be able to see what the ecological impact will be from such a project. They also need to be able to see what the economic loss will be if the ecological program is followed," he said.

Fairchild said the ecological organizations' impact on

Congress and on federally funded projects had diminished since the energy shortage and the food price increases.

"We are all ecologists to some degree. We must not destroy the environment, or we will ruin the very quality of life we are trying to enhance with these projects. On the other hand, we cannot turn the whole nation into a scenic river basin.

"Unless you have something to eat and a sound economic base in a community, you don't have a very good quality of life with just birds and bees," he added.

Some of the leaders of the natural resource districts objected to the costs of the additional planning. Hal Schroeder, manager of the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District, predicted that if the requirements were carried far enough, the cost of planning a smaller project might exceed the construction cost of the project.

When Schroeder drew support from other Nebraska leaders, Fairchild reminded them they had already considered most of the items in an alternative plan.

"All you really have to do is put it together in written form and send it along with the plan you support," he said.

Under the new regulations, Congress will make the actual selection of the plan for the project from the alternatives submitted by the local conservation district, which in Nebraska is the Natural Resource District.

Crop Loan Determined By Losses

It not only fits any situation that arises, but also taken with its context explains it, giving causes, warnings of judgement and curse, and pointing the way to blessing and safety.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE" is the opening words of the Second Psalm of God's Book, The Bible. God asks this question. God answers this question. Believe it or not, this is the God you will have to meet and give account of the deeds done in the flesh when your spirit leaves the body and returns to God who gave it! "The heart in your bosom is a 'muffled drum' beating a march for you to the cemetery," and to the appointment the Almighty has made for you to appear before His judgement seat! God commands His people and witnesses to warn men: "PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD—WHETHER ANY HEAR, OR ANY FORBEAR!" Webster says a heathen is "one who does not believe in the God of The Bible," and this fits in with what God Himself says in this Psalm: "People who imagine a vain thing. Kings and rulers who set themselves against God, His King, His Government and His Ten Commandments." The results of this rebellion is God's laughter, God's derision, God speaking in wrath, and God vexing mankind in His sore displeasure. But in mercy God informs the heathen He has set up His King upon the holy hill of Zion, and calls the kings of the earth to be wise, the judges of the earth to be instructed and "SERVE THE LORD WITH FEAR—LEST HE BE ANGRY, AND YE PERISH FROM THE WAY, WHEN HIS WRATH IS KINDLED BUT A LITTLE, BLESSED ARE ALL THEY WHICH PUT THEIR TRUST IN HIM."

We cannot hear God laugh. We can with the "eye of faith" see evidence of His Derision, and the vexations He sends or permits to come upon man; and with the "ear of faith" we can hear Him speak in wrath! We think God "spoke in wrath" to this whole nation in commanding or permitting President Kennedy to be suddenly cut off, and this Presidential Act was a rebuke to the nation for departing from the "faith and foundations of our founding fathers." Since the tragedy we have continued traveling away from these landmarks. Your time is ahead to be cut off, and so in mine! Have you, are you "Preparing to meet God?" Or, does pride and presumption cause you to feel you are already "just right?"

Above, the statement was made that the title "WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE" fits any situation that may arise, explains it, giving causes, warnings of the curse and judgement, but pointing the way to blessing and safety. In the following we try to illustrate this by making application of it to the problem of "segregation and integration," matters causing no little vexation to our nation, and in the world.

"The God of The Bible" instituted segregation in order to break up the integration He found going on when He visited the Tower of Babel—11th chapter of Genesis. He destroyed the Tower. The purpose of the destruction, confounding of languages, scattering and segregating the people into races, was to restrain the evil imaginations of men. In time this Act of God resulted in some of the earth's people being white, some black, some yellow, and others red, and the fixing of the bounds of their habitations—Acts 17:26. Mixed breeds, amalgamation, and mongrelization were the outcome of disobedience, "inordinate affection," lust, fornication, and the law of God that "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap!"

An irrefutable fact that segregation is the Will of God, and He is the author, is found in the history of the Jewish people today to the present hour. In the Providence of God integration for the flesh is not intended for this earthly life, though it has often come about in instances as the result of sin and disobedience. In the Providence of God integration for Spiritual life is intended by God for all who have been born by The Spirit of God into the Kingdom of God. Witness these words of Christ: "THE KINGDOM OF GOD COMETH NOT WITH OBSERVATION, NEITHER SHALL THEY SAY, LO HERE! OR, LO THERE! FOR BEHOLD THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU!" Luke 17:21.

Our title, taken in its entire Scriptural context, reveals the cause for segregation in the fleshly life of man is the Providence of God. It warns of God's laughter, derision, wrath, and the visitations of vexations to those who reject and resist His Acts and Providences. But it also urges and invites the people, kings, rulers, and judges of the earth to be wise, and he instructed, submit to God's King and ways, and receive the blessing of God.

Consider the strife, ill-will, blood-shed, and what might be called "ordered confusion" that has resulted since the 1954 decision of our Supreme Court calling for integration and rejecting the Acts and Providences of God Almighty. Are we not "fighting against God" and His Providence ordained to restrain the evil imagination of men? Nearly every time we note in the papers the demands for more and faster integration, the thought occurs: "On we go fighting against God Almighty, His Acts, and His Providences."

So, we submit our title "WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE" TAKEN IN ITS CONTEXT, EXPLAINS AND GIVES THE CAUSES OF THE VEXATIONS OF SEGREGATION AND INTEGRATION, WARNS OF THE CURSE AND WRATH OF GOD AHEAD, BUT URGES THE PEOPLE, KINGS, RULERS, AND JUDGES TO BE INSTRUCTED TO TURN TO GOD AND HIS CHRIST AND BE "THAT BLESSED PEOPLE WHOSE GOD IS THE LORD."

It is also applicable to the crime problem, juvenile problem, problems of immorality and incest, the death penalty problem, etc., etc. However, THUS SAITH THE LORD: "IF YE WILL NOT BELIEVE, YE SHALL NOT BE ESTABLISHED."

Isaiah 7:9 The hope of our nation and generation is in those who "TRUST AND OBEY, FOR THERE IS NO OTHER WAY!"

Congress Likely To Favor Planning

Warren Fairchild, chairman of the U.S. Water Resources Council, told officials of state, federal and local agencies involved in water resource planning that future projects were likely to receive favorable consideration by Congress.

"We used to be a nation with a food surplus. There was the argument that we didn't need to have irrigation projects and the like because we had too much food. Now we have high food prices, a worldwide need for food and no reserves, so much of the opposition to irrigation projects has dwindled," he said.

Fairchild told the group their planning agencies would need to submit alternative plans on projects along with the plan approved at the local level. Such plans might emphasize economic benefits while the alternative plan might emphasize ecological benefits.

Ecological Impact
 "Congress and the agencies who make these decisions should be able to see what the ecological impact will be from such a project. They also need to be able to see what the economic loss will be if the ecological program is followed," he said.

Fairchild said the ecological organizations' impact on

Congress and on federally funded projects had diminished since the energy shortage and the food price increases.

"We are all ecologists to some degree. We must not destroy the environment, or we will ruin the very quality of life we are trying to enhance with these projects. On the other hand, we cannot turn the whole nation into a scenic river basin.

"Unless you have something to eat and a sound economic base in a community, you don't have a very good quality of life with just birds and bees," he added.

Some of the leaders of the natural resource districts objected to the costs of the additional planning. Hal Schroeder, manager of the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District, predicted that if the requirements were carried far enough, the cost of planning a smaller project might exceed the construction cost of the project.

When Schroeder drew support from other Nebraska leaders, Fairchild reminded them they had already considered most of the items in an alternative plan.

"All you really have to do is put it together in written form and send it along with the plan you support," he said.

Under the new regulations, Congress will make the actual selection of the plan for the project from the alternatives submitted by the local conservation district, which in Nebraska is the Natural Resource District.

Firms Ask Air Control Delays

The State Department of Environmental Control (DEC) has slated three public hearings around the state next week on requests by 122 industries for additional time to install air pollution controls.

The majority of the industries are alfalfa dehydrators.

The first hearing will be Monday in North Platte and features all but four of the requests for variances. Tuesday's hearing will be at 2 p.m. in the DEC's conference room in Lincoln, and Wednesday's will be in Dakota City.

3 Task Forces To Study Plans

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer
The Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) Friday created three additional task forces to get more recommendations off the drawing board and onto the streets of Lincoln.

Task forces established include one on parking, another on downtown repaving projects and O Street beautification and one on Q Street redevelopment.

Lack of parking has been lamented as one of the central business district's major problems. DAC consultants Barton-Aschman have proposed that perimeter parking lots be built encircling the downtown core.

Construction of a 1,000-car parking garage in the Centrum, from 11th to 12th, N to O, also would fill the parking shortage gap.

Galleries, Lighting
Improvements suggested for O from 9th to 16th could include landscaping, lights, plus construction of galleries and other special sidewalk treatments.

DAC has recommended that O not be closed to traffic at this time from 11th to 12th, as suggested by Barton-Aschman. The consultants had proposed to use part of the street for the Centrum.

Also included in Phase I redevelopment is the renovation of the southern fringe of the university campus, along Q street.

13th Street Beautification
Other task forces already are studying 13th Street beautification, housing in the downtown and renovation of the old City Hall block.

In other business, DAC member George Williamson suggested office space be located to display the downtown proposals and to receive public comment on the plan.

Councilwoman Sue Bailey reminded the group the lawmakers would like Barton-Aschman to open up a downtown office during the time they are updating the Comprehensive Plan. Since the same firm is working on both plans, she suggested a combined office should be opened. No action was taken on that proposal.

Scherer Appointed
DAC Chairman Dick White announced that Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has appointed Community Development Director Leo Scherer to the management team. That team, which is a subcommittee of DAC, has been charged with directly overseeing task force efforts during the past year.

Booklet Remains; No Complaint Yet

The Lincoln Public Schools has received no communication from Xerox Corp. directing removal of the controversial booklet, "Population Control," in which Catholic views on birth control are criticized.

According to Lincoln Public Schools officials Friday, the booklet, used only as reference material in the schools, will remain on school library shelves unless further information or a complaint is received.

Neal Cross, consultant for the schools, said no official complaint has been received concerning the publication. Until a complaint is filed or further communication is received from Xerox, the schools would have no reason to remove the booklet, he said.

Xerox Corp. announced Friday that the booklet, published by one of its subsidiaries, will be withdrawn from circulation and that it has agreed not to reissue the publication.

Religious and Civil Rights, which was preparing to file suit against Xerox, contended it received complaints from parents of Catholic public school students in Lincoln as well as in Birmingham, Mich., and Dade County, Fla.

The Catholic group had complained about the alleged anti-Catholic statements in the booklet, primarily about the statements on the church's stand on birth control.

The office of the Nebraska Catholic Conference said its information was that no court actions were planned since Xerox had agreed to withdraw the booklet from circulation and not to reissue it.

committee" session. Curtis said the steering committee, composed of conservative members of the House and Senate, didn't formulate a specific plan to get Goldwater the vice presidential nomination.

"The steering committee isn't trying to dictate either to the Senate, or to President Ford or to the country who we want for vice president," Curtis said. "We just sat down and visited for a little while and discovered that Barry Goldwater was one of the most popular men in public life today."

Curtis added that he would back "whoever President Ford decides to select."

"There is no organized or formal movement for Sen. Goldwater," Curtis said. "We feel the utmost confidence in President Ford. Pressure at this time would be inappropriate."

"On the issues of inflation, defense and foreign affairs," Curtis said. "Senator Goldwater meets the needs of the hour."

Boys Town
May Be Coed

Omaha (AP) — Boys Town may soon become coeducational, an official said Friday.

Herbert Sigurdson, deputy director for child care services, said any such move would be made slowly, after changes in the present program.

He said based on his observation elsewhere, he thinks a coed child care program is healthy. However, he said the move wouldn't come for at least a year.

Boys Town is already hiring married couples and women counselors and cottage supervisors, he said.

Sigurdson said the need for the type of counseling and care Boys Town provides is great among both boys and girls.

Mutual Branch Office Approved

The State Banking Department Friday announced the approval of an application filed by Mutual Savings Co. of Lincoln to establish an auxiliary office.

Probable opening date of the office is Oct. 1, according to company president James L. Larson. The office, which will be located at 800 N. 48th, will be remodeled before then, he said.

Vice-president Dave Weidder will be in charge of the new branch, Larson said, and will have two staff members working for him.

Bruckner will represent Circuit 8, which includes Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Arkansas.

He was elected at the 28th national convention of the organization, a seven-day event in San Francisco.

Accident Rate Higher; Fewer Involve Alcohol

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Alcohol-related traffic accidents have decreased in Lincoln in the last five years, while total accidents have increased. That "puzzles" the director of the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project (LASAP).

"We really don't know why," said James Shelley, "but we would like to think we've contributed to the decline."

In the first six months of this year, 195 accidents, or 8.2% of a total 2,369, were alcohol-related.

That compares with 507 alcohol-related accidents, or 8.4% of a total 6,047 accidents in 1973.

Back in 1969, 10.9%, or 514 of a total 4,718 accidents, involved drinking.

Shelley explained that an accident is classified as alcohol-related if a "driving while intoxicated" arrest is made at the time of the accident, or if the police officer investigating the crash indicates on the accident report that the driver had been drinking.

No blood alcohol concentration (BAC) test is required to classify an accident as alcohol-related. The officer's judgment, Shelley said, is indication enough.

Combined with a reduction in the number of fatal accidents over the last two years, Shelley called these indicators "an encouraging trend, especially in the light of the increase in licensed drivers and miles driven."

He said he did not know how Lincoln's alcohol-related accidents compared to national statistics.

Total traffic accidents — not necessarily alcohol-related — on Nebraska highways for the month of June left 32 people dead, the State Accident Record Bureau reported Friday.

Six people died on June 8, the worst day of the month, with five deaths occurring on June 24.

Hardest hit was the 11 to 21 age bracket with 14 lives lost. Seven deaths were in the 22 to 33 bracket, with five people between the ages of 34 and 35.

Accidents on county roads and at county road intersections accounted for 20 deaths, while some 20 victims were killed in collisions.

Some 22 people were killed during the night hours and the same number of victims were drivers.

Nixon May Claim Missing Tapes On Legal Ground, Say Lawyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Richard M. Nixon's lawyers disclosed Friday that 17 minutes are missing from a subpoenaed Watergate tape, a spokesman for White House lawyers said the former president may have a legal claim to those controversial recordings.

Larry Speaks, the spokesman for the White House lawyers, said the recordings of presidential conversations remain under Secret Service guard in a locked vault. He said that to his knowledge none of the Watergate material was taken by Nixon when he flew to California on Friday to begin life as a private citizen.

Jerald F. terHorst, press secretary for President Ford, said Nixon had not signed a pardon "or any form of immunity for himself before he left office." TerHorst said the Ford administration will not use a taping system to record White House conversations.

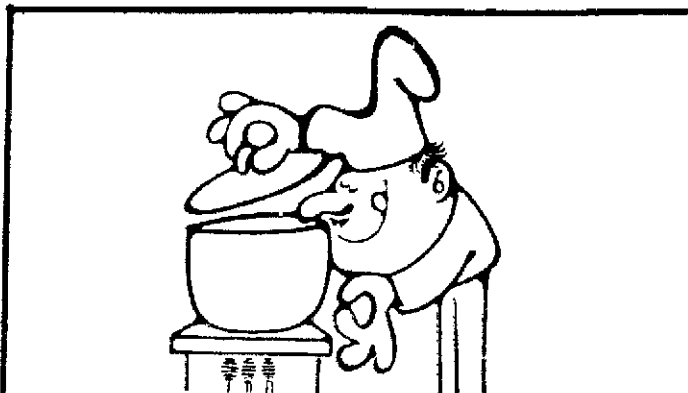

The revelation that 17 minutes were missing from a taped conversation between Nixon and former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson was made Friday when Nixon's lawyers appeared in U.S. District Court.

In an analysis of some of the 64 taped conversations subpoenaed by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, James D. St. Clair said the gap occurred when a tape reel ran out during a Nixon-Colson conversation on March 21, 1973. The conversation occurred the same day John W. Dean III warned Nixon that Watergate had become a cancer threatening the presidency.

"The question of whether they're in the custody of the former president, or the White House, we don't know," Speaks said. At the Justice Department, spokesman John W. Hushen said the issue is unclear because of a Supreme Court order upholding Jaworski's subpoena.

"In the past," Hushen said, "presidential papers, which would include sound recordings, are the custody of the outgoing president."

The tapes of most of the 64 conversations have been turned over to Judge John J. Sirica for his private inspection to determine what portions should be delivered to Jaworski. White House attorney John Chester delivered to Sirica on Friday papers that disclosed the 17 missing minutes.

Canadians Killed In Crash Of U.N. Transport Plane

By The Associated Press

A United Nations military transport plane crashed in Syria on Friday, killing all nine persons aboard.

A source at U.N. headquarters said Syrian authorities admitted hitting the plane in error with antiaircraft or missile fire. The Syrian civil aviation authority, however, said only that the plane, a twin-engine turboprop, crashed near Mt. Hermon during a clash between Israeli warplanes and Syrian ground defenses.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said the crew of five and the four passengers were all Canadians on a peacekeeping liaison flight between Beirut and Damascus. He said U.N. and Syrian searchers found no survivors when they reached the burned-out wreckage.

The Syrian statement said formations of Israeli planes violated Syrian airspace and attacked alleged Palestinian bases on the western foothills of Mt. Hermon in a region known as the Arkoub, where the borders of Syria, Lebanon and Israel converge.

The Israeli military command denied that Israeli warplanes were in the area at about 1 p.m. local time when the U.N. plane went down. It said its jet fighters raided Palestinian guerrilla bases west of Mt. Hermon about an hour earlier, striking at a tent encampment and two houses in an area described as a known concentration point for terrorists.

The Israeli command refused to say whether its raiding aircraft encountered antiaircraft fire or flew over Syrian air space.

Lebanese military sources said shortly after the attack that four houses were leveled in southern Lebanon, near its border with Israel and Syria, but there were no reports of casualties.

Two Lebanese villagers and three Palestinians were reported killed in two separate air strikes Wednesday carried out by Israel in retaliation for the abduction of four Israeli Arab workers on the Lebanese frontier.

The Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine admitted responsibility for the kidnappings, but said in a statement issued in Damascus that it had decided to release the abducted men "because it was established they are all Arabs."

Youth in Action Ballerina 'Wet Paint' Star

Genenne Gibson might well believe she'd been born with ballet slippers on.

This 11-year-old can hardly remember a time when she hasn't been dancing.

Eight years, she proudly replies to an inquiry on how long she's been at this graceful art.

The youngest of a quartet of musically talented sisters, Genenne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Gibson, 1948 Sewell.

Local TV Appearances
Genenne's likely to have danced her way into your living room sometime in the past in one of several appearances on local television programs.

This year she did five tapings for ETV's new children's program "Wet Paint."

The diversity of this young miss' talent was put to the test in the varied "Wet Paint" segments where she danced, interviewed residents of a local nursing home and did a mock commercial.

Promoting "Johnstone's" flowing tears baby shampoo, Genenne had her hair sprayed with whipped cream for a lather-like effect.

Onion Tears
Then they stopped in the middle of the filming, she related, to chop up some onions to make her cry.

"And it worked," she exclaimed, wincing at the memory of "those onions that smelled so bad."

Genenne has had a chance to polish her stage presence in city recreation summer Show Wagon performances since she was six. She's placed in several contests and won the finals twice.

When not formally on stage

Genenne, her sisters and neighborhood friends have made up dances and put on plays for their parents.

No Plays Anymore
But she confided that these spontaneous neighborhood theatricals have subsided since "our older sisters won't do it anymore."

A sixth-grader at Prescott School, Genenne is looking to the future when she hopes to be a dancer in a ballet company like the Joffrey.

She'll be doubling her efforts in that direction this year with dance lessons twice a week.

3 Task Forces To Study Plans

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) Friday created three additional task forces to get more recommendations off the drawing board and onto the streets of Lincoln.

Task forces established include one on parking, another on downtown repaving projects and O Street beautification and one on Q Street redevelopment.

Lack of parking has been lamented as one of the central business district's major problems. DAC consultants Barton-Aschman have proposed that perimeter parking lots be built encircling the downtown core.

Construction of a 1,000-car parking garage in the Centrum, from 11th to 12th, N to O, also would fill the parking shortage gap.

Galleries, Lighting

Improvements suggested for O from 9th to 16th could include landscaping, lights, plus construction of galleries and other special sidewalk treatments.

DAC has recommended that O not be closed to traffic at this time from 11th to 12th, as suggested by Barton-Aschman. The consultants had proposed to use part of the street for the Centrum.

Also included in Phase I redevelopment is the renovation of the southern fringe of the university campus, along Q street.

13th Street Beautification

Other task forces already are studying 13th Street beautification, housing in the downtown and renovation of the old City Hall block.

In other business, DAC member George Williamson suggested office space be located to display the downtown proposals and to receive public comment on the plan.

Councilwoman Sue Bailey reminded the group the lawmakers would like Barton-Aschman to open up a downtown office during the time they are updating the Comprehensive Plan. Since the same firm is working on both plans, she suggested a combined office should be opened. No action was taken on that proposal.

Scherer Appointed

DAC Chairman Dick White announced that Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has appointed Community Development Director Leo Scherer to the management team. That team, which is a subcommittee of DAC, has been charged with directly overseeing task force efforts during the past year.

Booklet Remains; No Complaint Yet

The Lincoln Public Schools has received no communication from Xerox Corp. directing removal of the controversial booklet, "Population Control," in which Catholic views on birth control are criticized.

According to Lincoln Public Schools officials Friday, the booklet, used only as reference material in the schools, will remain on school library shelves unless further information or a complaint is received.

Neal Cross, consultant for the schools, said no official complaint has been received concerning the publication. Until a complaint is filed or further communication is received from Xerox, the schools would have no reason to remove the booklet, he said.

Xerox Corp. announced Friday that the booklet, published by one of its subsidiaries, will be withdrawn from circulation and that it has agreed not to reissue the publication.

Religious and Civil Rights, which was preparing to file suit against Xerox, contended it received complaints from parents of Catholic public school students in Lincoln as well as in Birmingham, Mich., and Dade County, Fla.

The Catholic group had complained about the alleged anti-Catholic statements in the booklet, primarily about the statements on the church's stand on birth control.

The office of the Nebraska Catholic Conference said its information was that no court actions were planned since Xerox had agreed to withdraw the booklet from circulation and not to reissue it.

Curtis Backs Goldwater For Country's No. 2 Spot

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., one of former President Nixon's most loyal supporters, Friday night endorsed Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., for vice president.

Curtis said he preferred a vice president more conservative than former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and added "Sen. Goldwater has won the admiration of millions who opposed him in 1964."

Curtis was among a group of lawmakers meeting earlier Friday in a "Republican steering committee" session. Curtis said the steering committee, composed of conservative members of the House and Senate, didn't formulate a specific plan to get Goldwater the vice presidential nomination.

"The steering committee isn't trying to dictate either to the Senate, or to President Ford or to the country who we want for vice president," Curtis said. "We just sat down and visited for a little while and discovered that Barry Goldwater was one of the most popular men in public life today."

Accident Rate Higher; Fewer Involve Alcohol

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Alcohol-related traffic accidents have decreased in Lincoln in the last five years, while total accidents have increased. That "puzzles" the director of the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project (LASAP).

"We really don't know why," said James Shelley, "but we would like to think we've contributed to the decline."

In the first six months of this year, 195 accidents, or 8.2% of a total 2,369, were alcohol-related.

That compares with 507 alcohol-related accidents, or 8.4% of a total 6,047 accidents in 1973.

Back in 1969, 10.9%, or 514 of a total 4,718 accidents, involved drinking.

Shelley explained that an accident is classified as alcohol-related if a "driving while intoxicated" arrest is made at the time of the accident, or if the police officer investigating the crash indicates on the accident report that the driver had been drinking.

No blood alcohol concentration (BAC) test is required to classify an accident as alcohol-related. The officer's judgment, Shelley said, is indication enough.

Combined with a reduction in the number of fatal accidents over the last two years, Shelley called these indicators "an encouraging trend, especially in the light of the increase in licensed drivers and miles driven."

He said he did not know how Lincoln's alcohol-related accidents compared to national statistics.

Total traffic accidents — not necessarily alcohol-related — on Nebraska highways for the month of June left 32 people dead, the State Accident Record Bureau reported Friday.

Six people died on June 8, the worst day of the month, with five deaths occurring on June 24.

Hardest hit was the 11 to 21 age bracket with 14 lives lost. Seven deaths were in the 22 to 33 bracket, with five people between the ages of 34 and 35.

Accidents on county roads and at county road intersections accounted for 20 deaths, while some 20 victims were killed in collisions.

Some 22 people were killed during the night hours and the same number of victims were drivers.

Nixon May Claim Missing Tapes On Legal Ground, Say Lawyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Richard M. Nixon's lawyers disclosed Friday that 17 minutes are missing from a subpoenaed Watergate tape, a spokesman for White House lawyers said the former president may have a legal claim to those controversial recordings.

Larry Speaks, the spokesman for the White House lawyers, said the recordings of presidential conversations remain under Secret Service guard in a locked vault. He said that to his knowledge none of the Watergate material was taken by Nixon when he flew to California on Friday to begin life as a private citizen.

Jerald F. terHorst, press secretary for President Ford, said Nixon had not signed a pardon "or any form of immunity for himself before he left office." TerHorst said the Ford administration will not use a taping system to record White House conversations.

The revelation that 17 minutes were missing from a taped conversation between Nixon and former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson was made Friday when Nixon's lawyers appeared in U.S. District Court.

In an analysis of some of the 64 taped conversations subpoenaed by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, James D. St. Clair said the gap occurred when a tape reel ran out during a Nixon-Colson conversation on March 21, 1973. The conversation occurred the same day John W. Dean III warned Nixon that Watergate had become a cancer threatening the presidency.

"The question of whether they're in the custody of the former president, or the White House, we don't know," Speaks said.

At the Justice Department, spokesman John W. Hushen said the issue is unclear because of a Supreme Court order upholding Jaworski's subpoena.

"In the past," Hushen said, "presidential papers, which would include sound recordings, are the custody of the outgoing president."

The tapes of most of the 64 conversations have been turned over to Judge John J. Sirica for his private inspection to determine what portions should be delivered to Jaworski.

White House attorney John Chester delivered to Sirica on Friday papers that disclosed the 17 missing minutes.

Grain Firm Concedes Errors In Wheat Deal

Washington (AP) — Continental Grain Co., the largest supplier of wheat to the Soviet Union in massive transactions two years ago, has been put under a "cease and desist" order for allegedly submitting incomplete and inaccurate information to the government at that time, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Officials said Continental, with headquarters in New York, has consented to the order but that the firm contended the errors were unintentional and clerical in nature.

The company said further it had notified USDA of the errors and had voluntarily corrected them.

The order, similar to an injunction, stemmed from government charges filed more than a year ago that during the period July 24, 1972 through Nov. 3, 1972 Continental "filed incomplete and inaccurate reports with respect to its futures transactions and positions in wheat, corn, oats, soybeans, soybean oil, and soybean meal."

During the summer of 1972, the Soviet Union bought huge quantities of U.S. grain, including more than 400 million bushels of wheat. Continental supplied about one half of that plus other grains.

Canadians Killed In Crash Of U.N. Transport Plane

By The Associated Press

A United Nations military transport plane crashed in Syria on Friday, killing all nine persons aboard.

A source at U.N. headquarters said Syrian authorities admitted hitting the plane in error with antiaircraft or missile fire. The Syrian civil aviation authority, however, said only that the plane, a twin-engine turboprop, crashed near Mt. Hermon during a clash between Israeli warplanes and Syrian ground defenses.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said the crew of five and the four passengers were all Canadians on a peacekeeping liaison flight between Beirut and Damascus. He said U.N. and Syrian searchers found no survivors when they reached the burned-out wreckage.

The Syrian statement said formations of Israeli planes violated Syrian airspace and attacked alleged Palestinian bases on the western foothills of Mt. Hermon in a region known as the Arkoub, where the borders of Syria, Lebanon and Israel converge.

The Israeli military command denied that Israeli warplanes were in the area at about 1 p.m. local time when the U.N. plane went down. It said its jet fighters raided Palestinian guerrilla bases west of Mt. Hermon about an hour earlier, striking at a tent encampment and two houses in an area described as a known concentration point for terrorists.

The Israeli command refused to say whether its raiding aircraft encountered antiaircraft fire or flew over Syrian air space.

Lebanese military sources said shortly after the attack that four houses were leveled in southern Lebanon, near its border with Israel and Syria, but there were no reports of casualties.

Two Lebanese villagers and three Palestinians were reported killed in two separate air strikes Wednesday carried out by Israel in retaliation for the abduction of four Israeli Arab workers on the Lebanese frontier.

The Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine admitted responsibility for the kidnappings, but said in a statement issued in Damascus that it had decided to release the abducted men "because it was established they are all Arabs."

Youth in Action Ballerina 'Wet Paint' Star

Genenne Gibson might well believe she'd been born with ballet slippers on.

This 11-year-old can hardly remember a time when she hasn't been dancing.

Eight years, she proudly replies to an inquiry on how long she's been at this graceful art.

The youngest of a quartet of musically talented sisters, Genenne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Gibson, 1948 Sewell.

Local TV Appearances

Genenne's likely to have danced her way into your living room sometime in the past in one of several appearances on local television programs.

This year she did five tapings for ETV's new children's program "Wet Paint."

The diversity of this young miss' talent was put to the test in the varied "Wet Paint" segments where she danced, interviewed residents of a local nursing home and did a mock commercial.

Promoting "Johnstone's flowing tears baby shampoo," Genenne had her hair sprayed with whipped cream for a lather-like effect.

Onion Tears

Then they stopped in the middle of the filming, she related, to chop up some onions to make her cry.

"And it worked," she exclaimed, wincing at the memory of "those onions that smelled so bad."

Genenne has had a chance to polish her stage presence in city recreation summer Show Wagon performances since she was six. She's placed in several contests and won the finals twice.

When not formally on stage

Genenne, her sisters and neighborhood friends have made up dances and put on plays for their parents.

No Plays Anymore

But she confided that these spontaneous neighborhood theatricals have subsided since "our older sisters won't do it anymore."

A sixth-grader at Prescott School, Genenne is looking to the future when she hopes to be a dancer in a ballet company like the Joffrey.

She'll be doubling her efforts in that direction this year with dance lessons twice a week.

GENNENE . . . dancer for eight years.

Fake fur adds a dressier look to the coat worn by Alexa Buetler; however, the "snorkel" coat, modeled by Edward Palleson, is bound to keep any youngster warm.

Fashions Provided by Richman Gordman

Well-coordinated colors draw these two distinct plaids together. Consisting of flared pants and a shirt, simulating the layered look, the ensemble is worn by Edward Palleson.

Whether in ordinary denim or unique plaid innovations, the western look is predicted to be popular this fall.

Alexa Buetler is shown wearing a washable knit, gored skirt in maroon with matching long-sleeved sweater featuring embroidered design and horizontal stripes.

It's Back-To-School In Mix-And Match Fashions

Now is the time to start shopping for those back-to-school clothes for children.

Personnel in local stores advise that early shoppers are smart shoppers, not only because selections now are at their best, but also because gradual shopping is not such a noticeable blow to the pocketbook.

Fashions for youngsters, kindergarten through sixth grades, focus this year on coordinates in easy-care polyester or cotton blend knits. And the color accent is on maroons and blues.

"Coordinates are in," said Ronni Dien of Richman Gordman, adding that, with the current economic crunch, they can be a blessing to the budget. "With mix-and-match coordinates, mothers are going to save money."

According to Mrs. Dien, through wise selection of clothing items and the use of coordinates, several complete outfits can be created from a limited number of clothes.

For example, selections of coordinates for girls at Richman Gordman feature a maroon, gored skirt, which can be worn with a number of tops, including a matching, long-sleeved sweater accented by embroidery on the front, and horizontal stripes encircling the midriff and cuffs; a variety of blouses; and a sweater-knit shell in gray with capped sleeves which can be worn over a turtleneck or blouse. An alternative to the skirt is a pair of plaid pants in maroon, gray and off-white.

In addition, buyers for children's apparel point out that the layered and western looks are still popular with youngsters today.

Illustrating the western look are the many, many cotton-blend shirts which often feature the western yoke and cuffs in red and white gingham.

Likewise, two-piece outfits of denim or denim-like fabrics not only display the western influence in style, but also are "fancied up" with silver studded designs on jacket and pant pockets or colorful, embroidered western motifs across the jacket back.

Displaying a subdued western style is a three-piece, heather blue ensemble at Hovland-Swanson. Fashioned of acrylic double knit, the outfit consists of a short, front-zipping jacket, an A-line skirt and pull-on slacks. Each piece features red topstitching and "cowpoke" yokes accented with brass rings.

"Dresses will be more popular this year with the young set," said Mrs. Dien.

"It is surprising, but little girls want to wear dresses more than they did a couple of years ago," agreed Mary Kohler, buyer for Hovland-Swanson. "Also, there will be more jumpers this year."

Constructed primarily of washable knits, the dresses and jumpers are fashioned in the loose-fitting A-line or smock styles.

"It used to be that boys were not dressed as handsomely as girls," said Mrs. Dien, "but boys are really coming into their own."

Styles for the young men this year include one-piece tops, simulating the layered look, baseball-styled shirts with fitted midriff and cuffs, cardigan and sweatshirt-like sweaters and turtle-necks.

Slacks for boys, which often feature elastic waistbands, are featured in the denim-look, corduroy and knit fabrics.

Whether plaid patterns or solids, "corduroy and the corduroy look are going to be big for fall," said Mike McVay of J.C. Penney.

And, of course, the denim jeans are always a popular and practical item for active children.

Fake fur is still the trend in girls' coats. Several of those being shown are hooded and a few are all fur; however, most feature fur on the collar, up the front and bordering the hem and cuffs.

Another practical idea, especially for Nebraska winters, is the survival or "snorkel" coat or ski jacket. These are constructed of a water-repellant nylon with a heavy-duty front zipper and roomy hood which extends over much of the face, thus protecting it from the winter chill.

Minister Will Have The Final Word

Dear Abby: We live in a small town and have always belonged to the Presbyterian church.

Our daughter is going to be married and wants a church wedding, so we went to our minister to discuss the wedding plans with him.

When our daughter told the minister that she wanted two special love songs sung at her wedding, he said: "I will not allow love songs to be sung in MY church!" (Get that, Abby: "HIS" church.)

Does he have the right to dictate what kind of songs will be sung at our daughter's wedding? Rush your reply, please.

UPSET
DEAR UPSET: To quote from the rules of all United Presbyterian Churches in the U.S.A.: "The Christian marriage ceremony is a service of worship before God, normally conducted within the house of God. Reverence shall be expected on the part of all present, and the service shall be under the sole direction of the minister. Such music as accompanies the ceremony should direct attention to God, Who sanctifies marriage, and special care should be taken to assure that it is suitable and reverent."

Even though some ministers will bend the rules a little in order to accommodate some parishioners, not all will, so if your minister chooses to go strictly by the book, he is within his rights.

DEAR ABBY: The incident was as follows: I recently attended a lounge show. (The entertainers were friends of mine.) Since I had seen the show before, I decided to read a book and listen to the performance at the same time. (I have extraordinary powers of concentration, and am capable of doing many things at once. Frequently, I will watch TV, listen to the radio, and read.)

My friends who were performing interpreted my reading during their show as an act of rudeness. I meant no offense, but I have been severely criticized for this.

What are your thoughts?

VEGAS
DEAR VEGAS: I agree with your friends. Even though you may be able to read and listen at the same time (and had already seen the show), the others in the audience, and the performers, might get the impression that you were bored.

In the future, demonstrate your "extraordinary powers of concentration" at home, and give live entertainers the courtesy of your undivided attention.

Life Begins At Forty:

Many Reach The Ninth Decade

By ROBERT PETERSON
Probably the Eldest human of worldwide emnence is conductor Leopold Stokowski who recently celebrated his 92nd birthday. Lots of people reach the ninth decade, but few of them are people of celebrity status whose names are familiar to newspaper readers around the globe.

Stokowski is a colorful old bird in many ways, not the least of which is his sympathy and understanding of modern youth.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Saturday

Scorpio, Capricorn and Aquarius stand out in different areas. Hank Aaron, the new home-run king, was born under Aquarius. February 5th, Babe Ruth, the immortal, was an Aquarian born February 6th. Scorpio is significant because more U.S. presidents were born under that zodiacal sign than for Capricorn, more world heavyweight boxing champions were Capricorns than any other sign. Thus Scorpio, Capricorn and Aquarius — apparently a trinity of winners.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on payments, collections, protection of valuables. Check details connected with investments. Don't sign papers unless you're sure that loopholes are closed. Aquar us: Leo and Scorpio individuals could be in picture. Get money's worth — and count your change!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dynamic action rebores doubt, lethargy. Cycle is such that personal life, personal appearance, direct confrontations are emphasized. Take initiative. Examine various possibilities — choose the best for advancement. Trust your own judgment, intuition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get involved in special group club organization. Be active in connection with hospital, institution, charitable enterprise. Look behind the scenes in connection with domestic situation. Means respect, superficial explanations. Be will go to listen to make intelligent conclusions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intrigue, romance, a feeling of fantasy fulfilled is indicated. Accent is on hopes, wishes, gain from business endeavors. You are vindicated, rewarded. But don't throw caution to winds. It is necessary to separate fact from con game. You will un-derstand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show that you mean business. Get to heart of matters in any relationship be mature. Treat others as you would have them treat you. Yes, Golden Rule is an essential guide. Capricorn: Cancer persons could be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent is on knowledge, perception, travel and special communications. You reach more persons through better distribution, more effective advertising. On personal level you feel needed. Aries: Libra are in-voiced.

people are frequently too slow in adjusting to these changes. Many of these student protests are against dead attitudes and these young people are right — these dead old attitudes must be altered if we're ever going to improve this tired old world."

He said there was an especial need for change in educational systems "Much in education today is routine and dry. We need to update teaching methods — make it more vital and meaningful to students."

Perhaps more of us need to adopt Stokowski's open-mindedness. Many of us tend to go along with the establishment and assume rebellious students are wrong and should be sternly criticized and repressed. We shake our heads and comment that the world has reached a sorry state when the young start spurning the rules and traditions of their forebears.

We may continue to deplore destruction of property and physical violence, but we should be willing to examine the issues and consider whether there may be some merit in the demands and beliefs of the young.

If we study history we find other centuries had their share of riots, protests, and demonstrations, and that very often these rebellions — headed by young people and labeled irresponsible at the time — hastened changes which were sound, necessary, and beneficial to mankind in the long run.

Of course not all elders are so flexible in their thinking. The great cellist Pablo Casals passed on last year at the marvelous age of 95. Many considered him the greatest musician in the world. When asked what he thought of rock and other forms of modern music which young people seem to adore he said, "For me there is no value in such music. It's an error. I am a musician and if there were music in this I would understand. But it is not real music, so there is nothing there to understand."

Stokowski would probably agree in part, but would temper his criticism by saying the young are entitled to let their imaginations plan and create a kind of music that stimulates them. In the process they may conservatively open new doors to a new kind of music which will be hailed in decades yet to come.

Patrol Plans Crackdown

Omaha (AP) — Due to an apparent lack of regard for the 55 mile per hour speed limits in the state, Col. C. P. Karthaus, Nebraska State Patrol head said Friday he would crack down on speeding violators along Interstate 80.

Karthaus said that action was prompted by the results of a two hour, unannounced check by all districts along the interstate.

In the two hour period, 286 motorists were contacted for being in violation of the 55 m.p.h. speed limit, according to Karthaus.

Karthaus added that despite the number stopped, still other speeding cars got away because trooper did not have time for pursuit.

After obtaining the results of the check, Karthaus said, "The Nebraska State Patrol will have massive, unannounced radar check points throughout Nebraska until such time that voluntary compliance with the existing limits becomes more evident."

Life Begins At Forty:

By ROBERT PETERSON
Probably the Eldest human of worldwide eminence is conductor Leopold Stokowski who recently celebrated his 92nd birthday. Lots of people reach the ninth decade, but few of them are people of celebrity status whose names are familiar to newspaper readers around the globe.

Stokowski is a colorful old bird in many ways, not the least of which is his sympathy and understanding of modern youth.

Most of us along in years deplore the actions of modern youngsters in staging strikes, demonstrations, sit-ins, and riots.

But when Stokowski talked to reporters recently he lined up on the side of youth in most of these sociological matters. He said he found the present and especially exciting time of life and felt that much of the youthful rebellion today is justified.

"The world is changing rapidly," he said, "and older people are frequently too slow in adjusting to these changes. Many of these student protests are against dead attitudes and these young people are right — these dead old attitudes must be altered if we're ever going to improve this tired old world."

He said there was an especial need for change in educational systems. "Much in education today is routine and dry. We need to update teaching methods — make it more vital and meaningful to students."

Perhaps more of us need to adopt Stokowski's open-mindedness. Many of us tend to go along with the establishment and assume rebellious students are wrong and should be sternly criticized and repressed. We shake our heads and comment that the world has reached a sorry state when the young start spurning the rules and traditions of their forbears.

We may continue to deplore destruction of property and physical violence, but we should be willing to examine the issues and consider whether there may be some merit in the demands and beliefs of the young.

If we study history we find other centuries had their share of riots, protests, and demonstrations, and that very often these rebellions — headed by young people and labeled irresponsible at the time — hastened changes which were sound, necessary, and beneficial to mankind in the long run.

Of course not all elders are so flexible in their thinking. The great cellist Pablo Casals passed on last year at the marvelous age of 95. Many considered him the greatest musician in the world. When asked what he thought of rock and other forms of modern music which young people seem to adore he said, "For me there is no value in such music. It's an error. I am a musician and if there were music in this I would understand. But it is not real music, so there is nothing there to understand."

Stokowski would probably agree in part, but would temper his criticism by saying the young are entitled to let their imaginations plan and create a kind of music that stimulates them. In the process they may conceivably open new doors to a new kind of music which will be hailed in decades yet to come.

Patrol Plans Crackdown

Omaha (AP) — Due to an apparent lack of regard for the 55 mile per hour speed limits in the state, Col. C. P. Karthaus, Nebraska State Patrol head said Friday he would crack down on speeding violators along Interstate 80.

Karthaus said that action was prompted by the results of a two hour, unannounced check by all districts along the interstate.

In the two hour period, 266 motorists were contacted for being in violation of the 55 m.p.h. speed limit, according to Karthaus.

Karthaus added that despite the number stopped, still other speeding cars got away because trooper did not have time for pursuit.

After obtaining the results of the check, Karthaus said, "The Nebraska State Patrol will have massive, unannounced radar check points throughout Nebraska until such time that voluntary compliance with the existing limits becomes more evident."

ASTROLOGICAL
FORECAST
By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Saturday

Scorpio, Capricorn and Aquarius stand out in different areas. Hank Aaron, the new home run king, was born under Aquarius, February 5th. Babe Ruth, the immortal, was an Aquarian born February 6th. Scorpio is significant because more U.S. presidents were born under that zodiacal sign. As for Capricorn, more world heavyweight boxing champions were Capricorns than any other sign. Thus, Scorpio, Capricorn and Aquarius — apparently a trinity of winners.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on payments, collections, protection of valuables. Check details connected with investments. Don't sign papers unless you're sure that loopholes are closed. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio individuals could be in picture. Get money's worth — and count your change!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dynamic action replaces dull, lethargy. Cycle is such that personality, personal appearance, direct confrontations are emphasized. Take initiative. Examine various possibilities — choose the best for advancement. Trust your own judgment, intuition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get involved in special group, club, organization. Be active in connection with hospitals, institutions, charitable work. Give. Look behind the scenes in connection with domestic situation. Means respect, superficial explanations. Be willing to listen, to make intelligent concessions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intrigue, romance, a teasing of fantasy fulfilled is indicated. Accent is on hopes, wishes, gain from business endeavors. You are vindicated, rewarded. But don't throw caution to winds. It is necessary to separate fact from con game. You will understand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show that you mean business. Get to heart of matters. In any relationship, be mature. Treat others as you would have them treat you. Yes, Golden Rule is an essential guide. Capricorn, Cancer persons could be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent is on knowledge, perception, travel and special communications. You reach more persons through better distribution, more effective advertising. On personal level, you feel needed. Aries, Libra are involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pay compliance to a Virgo. Get started with new project. Bring forth creative resources. You will be gratified by special service provided by one you aided in past. Be aware of basic issues. Keep diet, health resolutions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Defer judgment. Wait and observe. Be wary about signing or cosigning legal papers. You require additional information. Cancer, Capricorn persons could figure prominently. Accent is on involvement, special relationship, marriage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forces tend to be scattered. Don't try too much at once. Measure moves — look to future. Social event could provide tonic. Know it and be receptive. Relaxation now is essential. Leave details for another time. Enjoy company of Gemini.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect coincides now with change, travel, variety, creative efforts. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. You are able to communicate. Young person paves meaningful compliment. Personal magnetism soars.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build on solid base. Secret quality. Eschew questionable "bargain." Someone wants something from you — for nothing. Be analytical. Seek Reasons. Get Beneath surface indications. Welcome chance for change of scenery.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have more dealing with family, relatives than usual. Be ready for visits, calls and special offers to purchase household furnishings, patio and luxury items. Be receptive, not glib. Taurus persons does want to do what is best for you.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, affectionate, have affairs of heart which are dramatic and, somehow, humorous. You have knack of making money by doing what comes naturally. May was important and in September you will travel, be entertained and find that your capacity to earn is boosted. You draw to you individuals concerned with theater; you are original, dynamic, stubborn and spoiled by members of the opposite sex.

Discover your love and money mates! Send birthdate (for our survey) and 75 cents to Omarr Astrology Secrets, The Lincoln Star, Box 3240, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017. You'll find answers in Sydney Omarr's booklet, "Secret Hints for Men and Women." Copyright 1974, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Meet Star Carrier Jeff Bracken

Outdoor enthusiast Jeff Bracken, Lincoln Star carrier-salesman in Elmwood, is described as industrious and dedicated by his route supervisor.

A carrier-salesman for nine months, 13-year-old Jeff enjoys camping and hiking and is buying a new Honda Trail Blazer motor bike with some of his route profits.

Jeff feels that his route has been very educational as well as profitable, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Bracken, say that the route has helped him organize his time, meet people, assume responsibility and taught him thrift.

A rock and bottle collector, Jeff also builds all kinds of models in his spare time and enjoys fishing, hunting and football.

During the time he has had his route he has increased the daily

Omaha Gives Support To Amtrak Route Plans

Omaha (AP) — Omaha will add its voice to those cities and organizations talking up an Amtrak passenger route through central Iowa and Nebraska to the West Coast.

Firemen Sue Omaha To Up Pension Fund

Omaha (AP) — A suit has been filed in Douglas County District Court in an attempt to force the City of Omaha to put at least $32,250,000 into its Police and Fire Pension Fund, an amount the suit says is needed to assure that pensions will be paid in the future.

The suit was filed by Joseph T. Kurtz, a fireman, and William E. Quinlan, a retired fireman. They allege that the city has failed to put that amount of money into the fund to finance "prior service liability."

The suit contends this has resulted in loss of interest that the money would have drawn and has resulted in the retirement system being financed solely by the current contributions of the city and pension fund members.

The city pays into the fund money equal to 8.3 per cent of its police and fire payroll, and the police and firemen pay 7 per cent of their monthly salaries.

"Prior service liability" is the debt incurred when the fund was established in 1957.

Some police and firemen were only a year away from retirement when the fund was established. They paid in for only one year but could draw for the rest of their lives.

A Chicago actuarial firm said last year amounts being paid into the fund will ultimately fall $32 million short of the future estimated retirement benefits.

the mayor's endorsement for the route. Keith said Zorinsky named his administrative assistant, Eugene Brailey, to accompany Keith to Washington to present WARP's case for the route to Transportation Undersecretary John Barnum Aug. 20.

Municipal and Chamber of Commerce officials from cities along the proposed route also will attend the meeting, Keith said.

The route WARP is proposing would run from Chicago through Clinton, Cedar Rapids, Ames and Carroll in Iowa and through Omaha, Grand Island and North Platte in Nebraska. It would go through Cheyenne, Wyo., to Rock Springs, Wyo., where the route would split, providing passage to Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles.

Another Amtrak route presently runs through southern Iowa and Nebraska and provides service between Chicago and Denver.

Congress allows Amtrak, the nation's public railway corporation, to establish one experimental route each year, and it is the 1975-76 route that WARP is seeking.

Markets...Business

Transfer Has Little Effect On Stocks

New York (AP) — The stock market quietly backed down another notch Friday, registering no strong reaction to the transfer of the nation's highest office to President Gerald R. Ford.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks retreated 7.59 points to 777.30.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines 766 to 550 among the 1,733 securities traded on the New York Stock Exchange. The Big Board's composite index slipped .34 to 42.39.

NYSE volume was a scant 10.16 million shares. After checking the flow of orders, exchange officials decided to allow trading to open as scheduled following Richard M. Nixon's announcement of his resignation Thursday night.

Trading began with no more than the usual flurry of early activity, and quickly settled down to a slow pace for the rest of the day.

The only unusual aspect of the session was some scattered boozing on the NYSE floor as the opening bell sounded. One broker on the floor called it only a playful expression of mock disappointment that the working day was to proceed as normal; another said he believed there was genuine feeling that the exchange should have delayed its opening in observance of the events in Washington.

However, the NYSE's rules prevent it from deciding on its own to stop scheduled trading unless conditions prevent orderly activity.

The session was characterized again by the profit-taking that began on Thursday following a sharp rally in the first three days of the week.

"The steam was taken out of the end-of-Watergate rally" by inflation news, said Manown "Buck" Kisor at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.

The government's report Thursday that wholesale prices soared at a 44.4 per cent annual rate in July was followed Friday morning by the announcement of a new price increase at General Motors, the nation's biggest industrial corporation.

The net effect, Kisor said, was "a growing realization that no matter what policies President Ford implements, the rate of inflation is likely to be higher in the next two or three quarters than had been expected."

GM shares were down 3/4 at 44 1/2 in active trading. The American Stock Exchange volume leader was McCulloch Oil, unchanged at 12 1/2 at 79.05.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down 7.59 points to 777.30. The NASDAQ composite index closed at 70.69, up .03.

New York (AP) — The stock market quietly backed down another notch Friday, registering no strong reaction to the transfer of the nation's highest office to President Gerald R. Ford.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks retreated 7.59 points to 777.30.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines 766 to 550 among the 1,733 securities traded on the New York Stock Exchange. The Big Board's composite index slipped .34 to 42.39.

NYSE volume was a scant 10.16 million shares. After checking the flow of orders, exchange officials decided to allow trading to open as scheduled following Richard M. Nixon's announcement of his

National Junior Olympics Set For Weekend

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

The City of Lincoln will be the amateur sports capital of the United States for the next three days as more than 1,600 boys and girls from every state compete in the eighth annual National AAU Junior Olympic Multisport Championships.

The only thing that could spoil the show is rainy weather, which the U.S. Weather Service says is a distinct possibility.

Only swimming, diving and track and field would be effected by the weather, however, since gymnastics is scheduled for Henzlik Hall, wrestling will be in the NU Coliseum, and judo and synchronized swimming will be in the Women's Physical Education Building.

Swimming and diving are scheduled for the Woods Park Pool, 33rd and J, and the track and field competition will be at the Ed Weir Track, located on the NU campus on Vine Street between the NU Coliseum and Memorial Stadium.

Only seven 1973 champions will be here to defend their titles, but most of the attrition is due to the maximum age limits.

Dan Plant of Scottsdale, Ariz., was a double winner last year in the 11-12 age bracket and will move up to compete in the 13-14 division here.

Other champions back for another try are Linda Stecker of Albuquerque, N.M., in the 880-yard run, Ken McLendon of Denver, Colo., in the long jump, Jay Berthiaume of New Hope, N.M., in heavyweight judo, Sarah Fruechte of Cedar Rapids, Ia., in girl's trampoline, and Michelle Menge of Arlington, Tex., in one-meter diving.

One of the most promising competitors in freestyle wrestling is Stephen Maury of Altoona, Pa., who only two weeks ago defeated Jimmy Carr, a 1972 Olympian, in a match in Erie, Pa. Maury will compete in the 123-pound class.

Freestyle wrestling isn't the same type used in America's high schools and colleges, but according to Nebraska wrestling coach Orval Borgialli, it's as close to the U.S. "catch-as-catch-can" style as you can get.

Swimming, by far, has most of the competitors with more than 900 entered. They'll use up a lot of blank shells starting all the heat races the next few days.

One event, the women's 100-meter freestyle, has the staggering total of 289 entries, indicating a need for tougher qualifying standards.

In track and field, a lot of local interest has been generated by the appearance of Mary Lou Jasnoch, the swift runner from Oshkosh who will run in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. She qualified in the Midwestern AAU meet in June at Hastings. Her time in the 100 is tied for the best in the nation going into the meet.

In the boys' division, the high hurdles could be one of the best races. There are six entrants who qualified with runs of :14.3 seconds and one with a :14.2 time.

McLendon could have a tough time repeating in the long jump. Skip Peterson of Sparks, Nev., had a regional distance of 23-9 1/4 compared with McLendon's 23-8. Another competitor, Marvin Rosenow of Milwaukee, Wis., also did 23-8.

Player Draws Near By Tying Meet Mark

Clemmons, N.C. (UPI) — Gary Player tied the tournament record with a six-under-par 64 Friday, moved within two strokes of the second round lead in the PGA Championship and set up the possibility of a classic finish involving three of golf's greatest names.

Although John Schlee, the in-house astrology expert of the pro golf tour, held the 36-hole lead with a five-under-par 135 following his 67 Friday, everyone's attention was fixed on the "big three" that trailed him by so little.

Hubert Green was alone in second place with a pair of 68's for 136 and then came:

— Player, trying to join Ben Hogan as the only men ever to win three major championships in a single year, in a tie at 137 with fellow South African Bobby Cole;

— Jack Nicklaus, following his second straight 69, at 138;

Player came charging down the stretch on this mushy and rain-drenched 7,050-yard Tanglewood Golf Club layout with one of the most impressive stretches of shotmaking ever seen in this 56-year-old championship.

He made six birdies in a seven-hole stretch from the eighth through the 14th hole and actually got within a single stroke of Schlee's lead before faltering only slightly with a bogey at No. 17.

The 64 tied the tournament mark established 10 years ago by Bobby Nichols at Columbus, Ohio, and tied by Nicklaus in the same tournament.

Gary, winner already of the Masters and the British Open this year and twice a winner of the PGA title, had opened here with a 73 on Thursday. He was being counted out early when another of the daily storms here dumped a lot of rain on the course just before he began play following a 45-minute delay but then he went right to work with a birdie on the first hole.

Until then, it didn't look like anyone was about to challenge Schlee's total, a figure which Nicklaus said was amazing.

"I'm amazed that someone can shoot 135 out here," said Jack, who was "delighted" with his own 138. "That (135) is awfully good scoring."

Schlee, one of three players who shared the first round lead, chipped in from 80-feet on one hole for a birdie, sand a 22-foot par putt at the final green, and credited his standing to luck — and the stars.

"When your signs are right, you can do anything," claimed Schlee, who believes so much in his hobby he's writing a book about astrology and golf.

Green, the No. 2 moneywinner on this year's PGA tour who, like Schlee is gunning for his first major championship, was in a brief tie for the lead until the rain hit.

He was forced to play four holes in the downpour, sloshing his way to two straight bogeys that knocked him out of the tie, before officials finally suspended play for 45 minutes. When it resumed, Green went back to the 16th green, where he already had hit his tee shot, and knocked in a 25-foot birdie putt.

That was early.

Player was just getting started; the hungry Nicklaus and Trevino already were in.

"It was a most unusual round for me," said Nicklaus. "I didn't play all that well."

Nicklaus finished on No. 18 in the rain, leaving a 45-foot putt 16 feet short and then making it from there for a par.

And Trevino, who made seven birdies and three bogeys in his 66 — the tournament's best round before Player finished — said, "The scoring conditions were ideal."

"With greens as soft as they are, if you drive well you can score well, because they can't put the pins anywhere you can't get to them," Trevino said.

Services Set For Hamilton

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Funeral services for John C. "Dode" Hamilton, 81, a former Nebraska state boxing commissioner, will be held Monday.

Hamilton was also assistant probation officer in Douglas County Juvenile Court before retiring in 1961. He was boxing commissioner from 1936 to 1942.

Survivors include his widow, Clare.

Foster Stripped Of WBC Title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The World Boxing Council stripped Bob Foster of his world lightweight crown Friday.

"Viewing that boxer Bob Foster should have made a defense against No.1 contender John Conteh and since he has been ignoring telegrams and telephone calls from the WBC, this council is compelled to withdraw recognition of his title," a council statement said.

The council ordered a fight between Conteh of England and No.2 challenger Jorge Ahumada of Argentina to be staged within 90 days to get a new champion.

Foster, from Albuquerque, N.M., is the third WBC boxer to be stripped of a title. The others are middleweight Carlos Monzon of Argentina and featherweight Eder Jofre of Brazil.

Jensen Eyeing Title

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Knoxville, Iowa — One hundred and fifteen drivers are entered in the $30,000 Knoxville National Supermodified and Sprint car championship races scheduled here Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Marion County Fairgrounds racetrack.

Kenny Weld, winner of the last two championships will be back facing such top contenders as USAC and NASCAR driver Jan Opperman of Beaver Crossing and Knoxville Sprint car point champion Lonnie Jensen of Lincoln.

Gary Dunkle, Don Droud, Wayne Holz and Keith Hightshoe also from Lincoln are entered in the championships.

Racing will begin at 8 p.m. with five 10-lap heats followed by the Bert Sonner Memorial 15-lap feature, the 20-lap B feature and the 30-lap championship race.

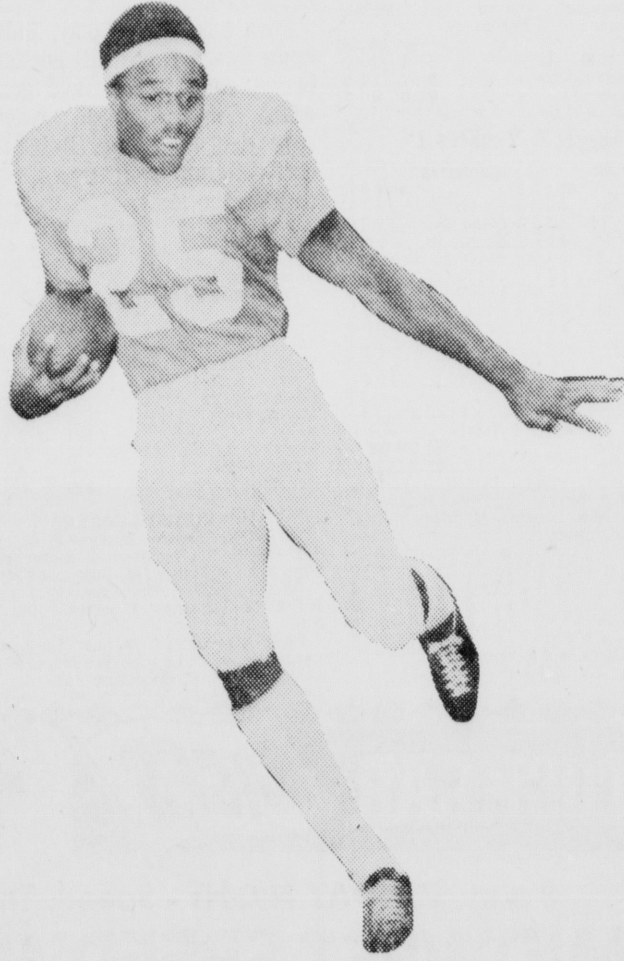

Jensen, who captured the point championship at the Marion County track this year sees his heavy competition coming from Rick Perkel and Jan Opperman but, as he puts it "with as many good drivers as they have entered here the racing will be highly competitive."

"I really don't like the track here too much, the toll on drivers is very heavy," said Jensen referring to the disabling crashes of Earl Wagner of Pleasantville, Iowa, and Ray Lee Goodwin of Polo, Mo.

"I think we have the car running right and with the right combinations of gears and tires we should be right up there with the best," said Jensen.

Dick Sutcliffe of Greenwood, Mo., who is leading Jensen for the Midwest Speedway point championships by just a few points, feels that he will really have to be prepared to win the Nationals.

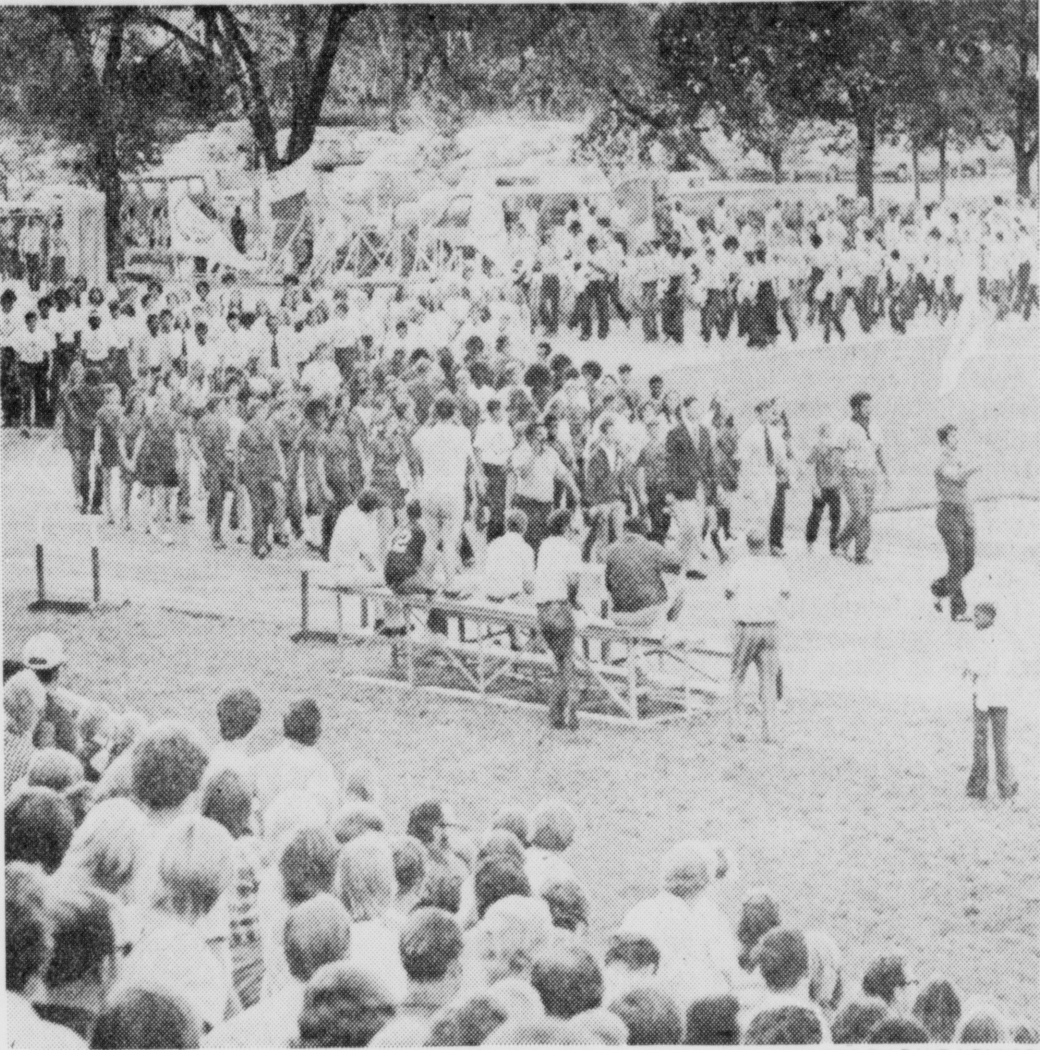

"We're going to have to be thinking right, in getting the right set up for the car. The competition here is great and all the top sprint car drivers from the country will be racing. So I will have to be sharper than ever," said Sutcliffe.

Omaha South's Darrell Walton, a 5-9, 160-pound wingback, will compete for the South team in next Saturday's Shrine Bowl football game at Lincoln's Memorial Stadium. Walton hopes it will be the first of many more Memorial Stadium appearances. He received a full football scholarship to attend Nebraska after leading South to a No. 2 spot in last year's Sunday Journal and Star Class A ratings.

No Accord Reached In NFL Strike Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators in the National Football League labor dispute met for 13 hours Friday without reaching an agreement and agreed to return Saturday morning in an attempt to resolve the 40-day players strike.

"We had our ups and downs, but we had a good day," said chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr. "We wouldn't be coming back if we weren't doing anything."

"If we had reached an impasse, we wouldn't be here at 10 a.m. tomorrow," he said.

A spokesman for the owners said there were 397 veterans in camp which represents 31 per cent of the work force. Of those vets, 126 are starters. That leaves about 500 starters still honoring NFL picket lines.

Earlier in the day, reports filtered out that some clubowners were working at cross-purposes with each other in negotiations.

It is understood that clubs which have a considerable number of veterans in their training camps are not in as much of a hurry to reach an agreement as are those teams which have few players in the fold.

Meanwhile, negotiators in the dispute apparently still aren't able to overcome the major stumbling block—the role of Commissioner Pete Rozelle—to end the 41-day strike.

While the NFL proceeded Friday to play the second week of the exhibition season with rookies and free agents, representatives of the players and owners continued negotiations with chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr.

"We had a amned good session," said Usery after a 3 1/2-hour morning meeting. "We've got it into a manageable area, where both sides understand what they have to do."

He emphasized however, that "there are still some tough issues to get over. I don't want to minimize it."

The negotiations broke again briefly at 6 p.m., after eight hours of bargaining, and Usery said they would continue during the evening, running perhaps as late as midnight.

Rozelle's authority in dealing with player grievances and several other so-called freedom demands by the players hold the key to the settlement of the strike, sources say.

It was also understood that Rozelle had been consulted for his view of the player demands.

Apparently the major hangup around settling the strike seems to rest more on the owners' side than with the players, according to the sources.

The attitude of the players has been ideal during the past week, it was learned, and the federal mediator has spent most of his time talking to the owners.

The union still plans to call the player representatives of each team to the nation's capital this weekend to give them an assessment of the negotiations.

The meeting was scheduled first for Friday afternoon but was later changed to Saturday afternoon at the earliest. It is understood that there is a possibility the meeting could be held Sunday.

Last Sunday, the union brought in some 60 players, including all but one team representative, to re-evaluate the situation. The group voted unanimously to continue support of the NFLPA executive committee in its strong stance against the owners.

Lincolmites Fall To Boulder

Wichita, Kan. (AP) — Boulder, Colo., pounded 17 hits and blanked Lincoln, Neb., 14-0 in five innings in the National Baseball Congress Tournament Friday night.

Rick Bradley blasted a three-run homer as the Boulder Collegians scored five runs in the first inning, and Dale Brock added a grand slammer during a nine-run outburst in the third inning.

Paul Hartzell, a Lehigh University junior from Bloomsburg, Pa., gave up only two hits, struck out seven and walked none in the five innings.

The Collegian righthander has a 12-1 record. The game was halted under a tourney lead rule.

Skinner Wins Junior Girls Golf Title

By VIRGIL PARKER

Val Skinner, a 13-year-old from North Platte, captured the Nebraska Junior Girls State Golf Championship at the Lincoln Country Club Friday with a 1-up victory over Omaha's Theresa Wanek.

The petite junior high schooler had to sink a crucial three-foot putt on the final green to claim the crown after holding a three-up lead with just four holes to play.

"I didn't putt too well early in the match," Skinner admitted, "but I didn't give myself time to miss that last one. I just stepped up and knocked it in."

Wanek, a junior-to-be at Omaha's Marion High, made a late charge by winning the 15th and 17th holes.

"I was three down going to the 15th," Wanek remembers, "but she (Skinner) went in the water on 15, so I won that. The really crucial hole was No. 16. I thought I had it won. If I had, we might still be playing."

Wanek said she reached the fringe (on No. 16) with her second shot, while Skinner was on the putting surface, "but a good 20 feet from the hole."

"I made my putt from off the green and had almost counted on winning the hole when she knocked in her 20-footer to halve the hole."

That gave the North Platte youngster some breathing room.

"But I got in trouble on No. 17 and she won that," Skinner said, "so I went to the final tee with just a 1-up lead."

Wanek put on the pressure at the final green. "Val was on in two and lagged her first putt up to within about two or three feet," the Omahan recalled.

"Though I didn't get on until after my third shot, I then knocked in a super 25-footer."

But Skinner responded to the challenge and made the short effort to claim the title in the tourney open to girls up to the age of 18.

"I'll be eligible four more times," Skinner observed. "I hope this was the first of five championships. At least that's my goal."

Eight-Horse Field In Lincoln Derby

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

Who to make the favorite for the Lincoln Derby Saturday? That will be a question bettors will face when they cast a disparing eye at the eight-horse field.

The mile jaunt for 3-year-olds carrying a $6,000-added purse has drawn such notables as Foreign Intent, an entry of Patsy's Reign and Queen's Turn, Villa Fire, Texas Heritage, Tom's Affair, Double Bourbon and Itemize.

Foreign Intent and Villa Fire have drawn the top weights of 122 pounds each for the race, but Patsy's Reign, who has scored in several allowance races this year, will carry only 117 in jockey Dave King.

P. Jones' Foreign Intent lost a heart-breaking race in the State Fair Handicap on July 27 when Fred Ecoffey brought him from far off the pace to close and lose by a half length to Roman Doc over six furlongs.

Patsy's Reign, racing as part of the Paul Kemling-owned entry with Queen's Turn, was the victor in a mile race in the State Fair Breeders Special, covering the same distance as the Derby in 1:41 — well off the track record of 1:37 set by Swift Capture in 1972.

Although finishing only eighth in the State Fair Handicap, the Circle S Stable-owned Villa Fire has posted impressive races in his 1974 campaign and will undoubtedly be fit for the Derby Saturday.

Texas Heritage, owned by Jack Wihelmy of Whiting, Iowa, has shown possibilities after becoming adjusted to the Fairgrounds' track. In his last outing Tuesday, Texas Heritage ran away from the field in the Past President's Purse over six furlongs to post a 1:12 2-5 clocking.

Queen's Turn, a stakes winner last year, has run into difficulties this year and will be saddled with only 115 pounds for the Derby while Tom's Affair will carry 112, Double Bourbon 114, and Itemize 112 and jockey Randall Meier.

In Friday's racing, Rodolfo Calderon proved to be the master of the extremely sloppy track and booted in three winners to lengthen his lead in the jockey standings.

Calderon collected his first win aboard Woodsparkstonight in the fourth, whipping the 3-year-old chestnut gelding home to win by two lengths over longshot Vin Vitae.

He collected his second win with Roaring Thunder in the sixth and his third with Patois in the ninth.

Woodsparkstonight returned $7.60 to win while Roaring Thunder pleased backers in the crowd of 5,719 with $7.20 and Patois $9.20.

In the featured seventh race, a six-furlong jaunt for 4-year-olds and older, Onefore Jim held off a fast closing bid by highly-regarded Race A Foot to collect the winner's laurels.

Race A Foot, a 6-5 favorite in the field of eight, broke last from the gate and made his bid down the backstretch.

Onefore Jim covered the six furlongs in the relatively slow time of 1:15 1-5.

Norfolk Girls Try For Record

Norfolk (AP) — A group of Norfolk girls have passed the half-way mark in their assault on the world's record for continuous trampoline jumping.

The Guinness Book of World Records says a group of Colorado boys now holds the mark at 31 days.

The seven junior high schoolers here began their marathon bouncing July 23, and have had officials continuously on hand to make sure the activity does not cease.

The girls hope to go 32 days, and are raising money for retarded persons with the attempt, which is being staged at a local shopping center.

Stevens To Help On Husker Games

Omaha sportscaster Lee Stevens will join KLIN radio's broadcasting team for all 1974 Nebraska football games.

Stevens will handle the game color, the Tom Osborne Dressing Room Show, and work along side Don Gill, who will handle play-by-play.

Aunt Priscilla Loses Two Races

Your dear Auntie Priscilla is coming close, but horse racing isn't horseshoes and closeness doesn't count.

Aunt Priscilla Loses $4.00

I lost $4.00 Friday with $2.00 win tickets on Race A Foot in the seventh (beaten a half-length at the wire) and Vicky Capri in the ninth (third by three lengths).

That drops my $104 spree fund down to $72.00, but I hope to get back in the win column with $2.00 to win on Make Contact in the fifth and Vagabond Queen in the eighth.

Simpson In No Hurry To Report To Camp

BUFFALO (AP) — Running back O.J. Simpson, the National Football League's most valuable player last year, said Friday he feels no sense of urgency to report to the Buffalo Bills' training camp.

"Physically, it will take me only 10 days to be ready," he said in an interview after working out with other striking veterans at a bootleg camp at Erie Community College.

"I'm not yet in the best shape I've been in, so it will take me about that long. But we're almost all in good condition. There's only one guy who is overweight."

Injuries Hamper Practice

By The Associated Press
Minor injuries to members of the South Shrine Bowl football squads marred a practice session at Doane College in Crete but Coach Milt Tenopir of McCook said the injured should be returning to practice soon.

Pat Gibbons of Omaha West-side sprained an ankle and Greg Rosener of Fairbury had a pulled groin muscle.

Tenopir said a good deal of polishing remains to be done but the squad is shaping up.

He said he won't be finalizing a lineup until the middle of next week.

North coach Keith Staehr of Kimball said his starting lineup is beginning to shape up in practice sessions at Fremont.

He said his offensive line is "pretty well set," citing the work of guards Glen Sullivan of Lincoln Northeast and Tom O'Doherty of Omaha Creighton Prep; tackles Mike Dowd of Grand Island and Denny Tuma of North Loup-Scotia; and ends Tom Ritter of West Point Central Catholic and George Andrews of Omaha Burke.

The quarterback position remains open with three candidates vying for the starting slot: Rick Benish of Norfolk, Chuck Micek of St. Edward and Steve Smidt of North Platte.

The top four running backs cited by Staehr are Ted Harvey of Lexington, Fred Knapple of Lexington, Mike Cherry of Ansley and Rick Klug of Omaha Northwest.

Staehr said with the offense beginning to take shape he is now turning more attention to developing the defense.

PGA Score Mark Tied By Player

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — South African Gary Player, running off six birdies in a seven-hole span, shot a 64 Friday to tie the record for a round in a PGA championship.

Player's brilliant round had been equaled only twice before in tournament history. Both previous 64s, one by Jack Nicklaus and the other by Bobby Nichols, were posted during the 1964 PGA championship at Columbus, Ohio.

Player went into Friday's second round five strokes off the lead after a double bogey on the final hole left him with a 3-over-par 73 in the opening round.

Friday's 64 gave him a twoday total of 3-under-par 137, just two strokes off the pace set by John Snel (68-67-135).

"I didn't start until long after John finished so I knew that I was eight strokes back by the time I teed off," said Player. "I usually play the course, not a particular player, but I knew I had to make up some ground."

Player, already winner of the Masters and British Open this year and bidding to become the only man other than Ben Hogan (1953) to win three "major" professional championships the same year, wasted no time in his pursuit of Schlee.

He sank a 15-foot birdie putt on the very first hole, almost canned another birdie at No. 2, and put his drive just two feet from the cup on the par-3 third.

Player's momentum was slowed momentarily at No. 4 when, after playing out of a trap, he booted a six-foot putt and had to take a bogey.

Three pars later, his sensational streak began.

Player sank consecutive birdie putts of 7, 25 and 12 feet: missed a 10-footer at No. 11; then came back with consecutive birdie putts of 14, 15 and 3 feet to forge within one stroke of Schlee.

At that point, Player was 7 under par for the day and seemingly enroute to a PGA record.

"I really would have like to have broken the record," said Player. "That's why the bogey at No. 17 bothered me a little."

"I got into the rough in front of the green and there was no way I could play out of it as I would have liked. That little mound of grass may very well cost someone this tournament."

Player insisted that he had the worst of the bad weather that has been plaguing this PGA, both days.

"Thursday, when I was an early starter, we had to contend with wet fairways and the afternoon group got to play on them after they started drying out."

"Today, the early starters had the drier fairways because we didn't go out until after the rain."

The rain Player referred to was a torrential downpour that suspended play for 45 minutes. Player had part of his practice washed out by that downpour and spent the 45 minutes waiting in the clubhouse.

Player pointed out that those six birdies in seven holes was his best performance.

"At the Masters, one time, I had six birdies in a row. That's better."

Player wound up the second round tied for third place with fellow South African Bobby Cole who had a 68-137. They were one stroke behind secondplace Hubert Green and two behind Schlee.

"That's a lot better than what I started with today," said Player.

O. J. Simpson

Simpson, who rushed for 2,003 yards last year, said NFL coaches approach the question of time required to be ready for a season in a different manner.

"They're faced with timing, evaluation and trades for guys who are good players but can't beat out the Reggie McKenzies, Donnie Greens and Dave Foleys," he said, referring to three of the four Bills who made up the offensive front wall that cleared the way for his record-breaking season.

The fourth member of that wall, guard Joe DeLamielleure, has reported to the Bills' training camp at Niagara University in nearby Niagara Falls. He was a rookie in the 1973 campaign.

The Bills, getting ready for a

Simmons' Homer Propels Cardinals

By United Press International
Ted Simmons celebrated his 25th birthday Friday night by hitting a two-out grand slam homer in the sixth inning to pace the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Simmons' homer was his 15th this year and his third career grand slammer. It was the first grand slam for St. Louis this season.

Cardinal starter and winner Alan Foster, 6-7, led off the sixth with a fly to center that bounced off the glove of Von Joshua for a two-base error. Lou Brock then beat out a slow bouncer in front of the plate but Ted Sizemore forced Foster at third base when he bunted back to losing pitcher Geoff Zahn.

Brock and Sizemore advanced on an infield out and Zahn walked Joe Torre to load the bases. Simmons then hit Zahn's first pitch into the left field stands.

Monday night game against the Chiefs in Kansas City, have 12 returning veterans in camp, four of them starters. Besides DeLamielleure, the starters are quarterback Joe Ferguson, line-backer John Skorupan and punter Spike Jones.

The other eight vets who reported are reserves, and Simmons expressed displeasure at statements made by coaches and media representatives that, unless marginal players report to camp, they will lose their jobs.

"If you've got confidence in your ability, you'll make someone's team," he said. "Those who are still here (on strike) have confidence. They've been told they'll lose their opportunity, but they'll play somewhere."

"If I were a marginal player, I'd be in camp too after what's been said. But I'm not. And if I were in camp, I wouldn't play in a game until some of these fellows (offensive linemen) were in there with me."

The Juice made it plain he was not upset at the Bills' management, just annoyed over the "scare talk" aimed at fringe players.

"I just hope individuals won't be singled out for not having been there (in training camp)," he said.

In other games, New York stopped Cincinnati 4-1, San Francisco blanked Chicago 3-0, Montreal nipped Houston 4-3, Pittsburgh downed San Diego 7-3, and Atlanta edged Philadelphia 3-2 in 11 innings.

Bob Apodaca and Tug McGraw combined on a four-hitter and Don Hahn slammed a three-run homer to lead the Mets to a triumph over the Reds.

The loss prevented the Reds from gaining on the first place Dodgers in the National League West. Los Angeles, which lost to St. Louis, still leads the Reds by 5 1/2 games.

Gary Matthews and Dave Kingman each hit his 12th homer to help right-hander Jim Barr to his sixth straight victory in a shutout for the Giants over the Cubs. It was Barr's fourth shutout and 10th win against five defeats, while it was the 12th time the Cubs have been blanked this season.

Ex-Detroit outfielder Jim Northrup, playing his first National League game, slammed a game-tying home run and also scored the go-ahead run to lead the Expos to a come-from-behind victory over the Astros.

A pair of errors by shortstop Enzo Hernandez enabled Pittsburgh to score three runs in the first inning and the Pirates went on to defeat the Padres behind the eight-hit pitching of Jim Rooker for their fifth consecutive triumph.

It was Rooker's eighth win against nine defeats and Pittsburgh's 19th victory in its last 27 games. It was the 37th complete game by the Pirates' pitching staff, high for the league and Pittsburgh's 26th victory in its last 36 home games.

Ralph Garr doubled and scored the deciding run on Darrell Evans' 11th inning sacrifice fly to give the Braves a win over the Phillies.

Berger, Boucher Tops At Wahoo

Wahoo — Bob Berger tallied 75 points in saddle bronc riding to pace rodeo standouts here Friday night at the Wahoo Rodeo.

C. R. Boucher, the 1964 world champion steer wrestler, took honors in his specialty outdistancing Rusty Young of Opelika, Ala., who finished second 5-0-5.8.

Saddle bronc riding — 1. Perry Lee, Iowa 75.2; 2. Bob Berger, Norman, Okla. 71.7; 3. Bill Payer, Miles City, Mont. 70.4; 4. Steve Wrenning, 1. R. Boucher, Fairbury, Okla. 5.0; 2. Rusty Young, Opelika, Ala. 5.8; 3. Bullfinch, 1.1; 2. Don Reichart, Atterich, Ia. 70.2.

The rain Player referred to was a torrential downpour that suspended play for 45 minutes. Player had part of his practice washed out by that downpour and spent the 45 minutes waiting in the clubhouse.

Player pointed out that those six birdies in seven holes was his best performance.

Oilers Rip Redskins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Houston quarterback James Foyte passed for two touchdowns and running back Steve Coleman threw for another Friday night to pace the Oilers to 48-3 victory over the Washington Redskins before a skimpy crowd of 14,786 in Robert F. Kennedy stadium.

Rookie Matthew Williams ran for two touchdowns and Terrence Wells added another as Houston manhandled Washington in the error-marred game.

Second-year kicker Finn Seemann rounded out the Oilers' scoring with field goals of 31 and 26 yards.

The crowd was 1,617 skimpier than that which showed for the Redskins preseason home opener against New England last Friday night. But the boos were lusty as Washington's offense sputtered and the defense let the Oilers move the ball almost at will.

Washington's only points came on a 46-yard first quarter field goal by Mark Moseley, a fourth-year pro who was the most seasoned man on the Redskins' squad as the NFL players' strike continued.

The Oilers now have won two and the Redskins have lost two in the young exhibition season.

Morrall Criticizes Garvey

MIAMI (UPI) — Veteran quarterback Earl Morrall of the Miami Dolphins said Friday "Ed Garvey should be fired" as executive secretary of the NFL Players Association.

Morrall commented for the first time at length on the players association strike in an interview with Ed Plaisted, sports editor of the Hollywood Sun-Tattler.

"The only way we're going to settle this strike quickly is with responsible and reasonable leadership," said the 40-year-old Morrall, who is a charter member of the NFLPA.

"Garvey is more concerned with his own image than about the players he represents. That is why I crossed the picket line early. It was my way of protesting Garvey's strong-arm tactics in this strike."

Morrall reported for his 19th season in pro football when Dolphins head coach Don Shula called him prior to the team's first intra-squad practice game in early July because Shula had only one healthy rookie quarterback in camp.

"I look at all the demands (of the NFLPA) and I just don't believe in all of them," Morrall said.

"Football has been too good to me to want to be part of an organization bent on destroying the sport."

For one thing, he said, he opposes any changes in the basic player contract because "to do away with them could destroy the game."

"Whether the owners win the argument or the players win the argument is not the important issue. I'm only looking at the game."

"If Garvey succeeds in tearing down the structure of the game, the losers will be the owners and players, not Garvey."

"The fans, who are getting mad about this strike, eventually will get sick of the whole situation and football will suffer."

He predicted the strike will be settled within seven to 10 days because the players realize that it will take them time to get in shape for regular season play.

"I think we need new leadership," Morrall said. "I think Garvey has come on too strong. He is that type of person you could see he was leading a strike from the very beginning. Garvey should be fired."

Morrall had no one to suggest as a replacement for Garvey except that he should be a moderate.

"Garvey's tactics have made us players look bad in the eyes of the public," the veteran quarterback added. "The public held us in high esteem and now the strike has brought us down to the level of a longshoremen's union."

North's Elmore Remains Hurt

Wayne — The North basketball all-stars concluded their first full day of workouts Friday on the Wayne State College campus in preparation for next week's All-Star game in Lincoln.

Head coach Al Bahe has been pleased with the progress shown by the North Stars during the first few days, but did express some concern over the condition of 6-4 Omaha Benson's Jeff Elmore.

Elmore reported to camp still showing the results of a strained ankle suffered last month.

Elmore has not been able to enter into all practice sessions due to the injury, but according to Bahe, he should be at full speed soon, and ready to go for next Friday's game.

Kearney Stater Gets ABA Post

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mike Kostich, 26, trainer at Kearney (Nebr.) State College, was named Friday the trainer for the American Basketball Association's new Spirits of St. Louis franchise.

Kostich, a native of the area, holds degrees from the universities of Missouri and Indiana and has served as a trainer with the Kansas City Chiefs as well as Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Cardinal farm teams.

Simpson In No Hurry To Report To Camp

BUFFALO (AP) — Running back O.J. Simpson, the National Football League's most valuable player last year, said Friday he feels no sense of urgency to report to the Buffalo Bills' training camp.

"Physically, it will take me only 10 days to be ready," he said in an interview after working out with other striking veterans at a bootleg camp at Erie Community College.

"I'm not yet in the best shape I've been in, so it will take me about that long. But we're almost all in good condition. There's only one guy who is overweight."

O. J. Simpson

Simpson, who rushed for 2,003 yards last year, said NFL coaches approach the question of time required to be ready for a season in a different manner.

"They're faced with timing, evaluation and trades for guys who are good players but can't beat out the Reggie McKenzies, Donnie Greens and Dave Foley," he said, referring to three of the four Bills who made up the offensive front wall that cleared the way for his record-breaking season.

The fourth member of that wall, guard Joe DeLamielleure, has reported to the Bills' training camp at Niagara University in nearby Niagara Falls. He was a rookie in the 1973 campaign.

The Bills, getting ready for a

Monday night game against the Chiefs in Kansas City, have 12 returning veterans in camp, four of them starters. Besides DeLamielleure, the starters are quarterback Joe Ferguson, line-backer John Skorupan and punter Spike Jones.

The other eight vets who reported are reserves, and Simpson expressed displeasure at statements made by coaches and media representatives that, unless marginal players report to camp, they will lose their jobs.

"If you've got confidence in your ability, you'll make someone's team," he said. "Those who are still here (on strike) have confidence. They've been told they'll lose their opportunity, but they'll play somewhere."

"If I were a marginal player, I'd be in camp too after what's been said. But I'm not. And if I were in camp, I wouldn't play in a game until some of these fellows (offensive linemen) were in there with me."

The Juice made it plain he was not upset at the Bills' management, just annoyed over the "scare talk" aimed at fringe players.

"I just hope individuals won't be singled out for not having been there (in training camp)," he said.

Injuries Hamper Practice

By The Associated Press
Minor injuries to members of the South Shrine Bowl football squads marred a practice session at Doane College in Crete but Coach Milt Tenopir of McCook said the injured should be returning to practice soon.

Pat Gibbons of Omaha West-side sprained an ankle and Greg Rosener of Fairbury had a pulled groin muscle.

Tenopir said a good deal of polishing remains to be done but the squad is shaping up.

He said he won't be finalizing a lineup until the middle of next week.

North coach Keith Staehr of Kimball said his starting lineup is beginning to shape up in practice sessions at Fremont.

He said his offensive line is "pretty well set," citing the work of guards Glen Sullivan of Lincoln Northeast and Tom O'Doherty of Omaha Creighton Prep; tackles Mike Dowd of Grand Island and Denny Tuma of North Loup-Scotia; and ends Tom Ritter of West Point Central Catholic and George Andrews of Omaha Burke.

The quarterback position remains open with three candidates vying for the starting slot: Rick Benish of Norfolk, Chuck Micek of St. Edward and Steve Smidt of North Platte.

The top four running backs cited by Staehr are Ted Harvey of Lexington, Mike Cherry of Anselmy and Rick Klug of Omaha Northwest.

Staehr said with the offense beginning to take shape he is now turning more attention to developing the defense.

PGA Score Mark Tied By Player

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — South African Gary Player, running off six birdies in a seven-hole span, shot a 64 Friday to tie the record for a round in a PGA championship.

Player's brilliant round had been equaled only twice before in tournament history. Both previous 64s, one by Jack Nicklaus and the other by Bobby Nichols, were posted during the 1964 PGA championship at Columbus, Ohio.

Player went into Friday's second round five strokes off the lead after a double bogey on the final hole left him with a 3-over-par 73 in the opening round.

Friday's 64 gave him a twoday total of 3-under-par 137, just two strokes off the pace set by John Schlee (68-67-135).

"I didn't start until long after John finished so I knew that I was eight strokes back by the time I teed off," said Player. "I usually play the course, not a particular player, but I knew I had to make up some ground."

Player, already winner of the Masters and British Open this year and bidding to become the only man other than Ben Hogan (1953) to win three "major" professional championships the same year, wasted no time in his pursuit of Schlee.

He sank a 15-foot birdie putt on the very first hole, almost canned another birdie at No. 2, and put his drive just two feet from the cup on the par-3 third.

Player's momentum was slowed momentarily at No. 4 when, after playing out of a trap, he booted a six-foot putt and had to take a bogey.

Three pars later, his sensational streak began.

Player sank consecutive birdie putts of 7, 25 and 12 feet; missed a 10-footer at No. 11; then came back with consecutive birdie putts of 14, 15 and 3 feet to forge within one stroke of Schlee.

At that point, Player was 7 under par for the day and seemingly enroute to a PGA record.

"I really would have like to have broken the record," said Player. "That's why the bogey at No. 17 bothered me a little."

"I got into the rough in front of the green and there was no way I could play out of it as I would have liked. That little mound of grass may very well cost someone this tournament."

Player insisted that he had the worst of the bad weather that has been plaguing this PGA, both days.

"Thursday, when I was an early starter, we had to contend with wet fairways and the afternoon group got to play on them after they started drying out."

"Today, the early starters had the drier fairways because we didn't go out until after the rain."

The rain Player referred to was a torrential downpour that suspended play for 45 minutes. Player had part of his practice washed out by that downpour and spent the 45 minutes waiting in the clubhouse.

Player pointed out that those six birdies in seven holes was not his best performance.

"At the Masters, one time, I had six birdies in a row. That's better."

Player wound up the second round tied for third place with fellow South African Bobby Cole who had a 68-137. They were one stroke behind secondplace Hubert Green and two behind Schlee.

"That's a lot better than what I started with today," said Player.

Oilers Rip Redskins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Houston quarterback James Fouts passed for two touchdowns and running back Steve Coleman threw for another Friday night to pace the Oilers to 48-3 victory over the Washington Redskins before a skippy crowd of 14,786 in Robert F. Kennedy stadium.

Rookie Matthew Williams ran for two touchdowns and Terrence Wells added another as Houston manhandled Washington in the error-marred game.

Second-year kicker Finn Seemann rounded out the Oilers' scoring with field goals of 31 and 26 yards.

The crowd was 1,617 skimpier than that which showed for the Redskins preseason home opener against New England last Friday night. But the boos were lusty as Washington's offense sputtered and the defense let the Oilers move the ball almost at will.

Washington's only points came on a 46-yard first quarter field goal by Mark Moseley, a fourth-year pro who was the most seasoned man on the Redskins' squad as the NFL players' strike continued.

The Oilers now have won two and the Redskins have lost two in the young exhibition season.

Morrall Criticizes Garvey

MIAMI (UPI) — Veteran quarterback Earl Morrall of the Miami Dolphins said Friday "Ed Garvey should be fired" as executive secretary of the NFL Players Association.

Morrall commented for the first time at length on the players association strike in an interview with Ed Plaisted, sports editor of the Hollywood Sun-Tattler.

"The only way we're going to settle this strike quickly is with responsible and reasonable leadership," said the 40-year-old Morrall, who is a charter member of the NFLPA.

"Garvey is more concerned with his own image than about the players he represents. That is why I crossed the picket line early. It was my way of protesting Garvey's strong-arm tactics in this strike."

Morrall reported for his 19th season in pro football when Dolphins head coach Don Shula called him prior to the team's first intra-squad practice game in early July because Shula had only one healthy rookie quarterback in camp.

"I look at all the demands (of the NFLPA) and I just don't believe in all of them," Morrall said.

"Football has been too good to me to want to be part of an organization bent on destroying the sport."

For one thing, he said, he opposes any changes in the basic player contract because "to do away with them could destroy the game."

"Whether the owners win the argument or the players win the argument is not the important issue. I'm only looking at the game."

"If Garvey succeeds in tearing down the structure of the game, the losers will be the owners and players, not Garvey."

"The fans, who are getting mad about this strike, eventually will get sick of the whole situation and football will suffer."

He predicted the strike will be settled within seven to 10 days because the players realize that it will take them time to get in shape for regular season play.

"I think we need new leadership," Morrall said. "I think Garvey has come on too strong. He is that type of person you could see he was leading a strike from the very beginning. Garvey should be fired."

Morrall had no one to suggest as a replacement for Garvey except that he should be a moderate.

"Garvey's tactics have made us players look bad in the eyes of the public," the veteran quarterback added. "The public held us in high esteem and now the strike has brought us down to the level of a longshoremen's union."

North's Elmore Remains Hurt

Wayne — The North basketball all-stars concluded their first full day of workouts Friday on the Wayne State College campus in preparation for next week's All-Star game in Lincoln.

Head coach Al Bahe has been pleased with the progress shown by the North Stars during the first few days, but did express some concern over the condition of 6-4 Omaha Benson's Jeff Elmore.

Elmore reported to camp still showing the results of a sprained ankle suffered last month.

Elmore has not been able to enter into all practice sessions due to the injury, but according to Bahe, he should be at full speed soon, and ready to go for next Friday's game.

Kearney Stater Gets ABA Post

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Kostich, 26, trainer at Kearney (Neb.) State College, was named Friday the trainer for the American Basketball Association's new Spirits of St. Louis franchise.

Kostich, a native of the area, holds degrees from the universities of Missouri and Indiana and has served as a trainer with the Kansas City Chiefs as well as Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Cardinal farm teams.

Rams-Cowboys Game Tops Exhibition State

By The Associated Press
It's almost just another exhibition football game—but not quite.

Not with Roger Staubach and John Hadl calling the signals and a couple of prime rookies on display.

And not with several 1973 scores still fresh in the minds of many of the Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rams.

"Even with a lot of the veterans not being here, it still can be very competitive," Staubach says of Saturday night's game. "It's still the Rams and Cowboys and I think we've established a pretty interesting tradition based on last season."

The two teams met in the 1973 preseason opener and Dallas ruined the coaching debut of the Rams' Chuck Knox, beating Los Angeles 24-7.

The Rams got their revenge several weeks later when Hadl threw four touchdown passes to Harold Jackson in a 37-31 regular-season victory.

But the Cowboys had the final say. Two days before Christmas, Staubach threw two touchdown passes to Drew Pearson in a 27-16 triumph that knocked the Rams out of the playoffs.

Roger Staubach
To Face Rams

Jackson and Pearson are among the players still striking, but Hadl and Staubach are scheduled to start.

In Saturday's other games, the New York Jets are at San Diego, Atlanta plays Oakland at Berkeley, Calif., Philadelphia visits Cincinnati, Miami hosts New Orleans, St. Louis meets Green Bay at Milwaukee and Minnesota opens its exhibition schedule at Denver.

On Sunday, the New York Giants are in New England and, on Monday night, it's Chicago at Pittsburgh, San Francisco at Cleveland and Buffalo at Kansas City.

Two big-name rookies will be going head-to-head in Los Angeles—Heisman Trophy running back John Cappelletti of the Rams and the NFL's top draft choice, Dallas' 6-foot-8 defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones. Also returning to action is Rams' wide receiver Lance Rentzel, a starter two years ago who sat out the 1973 campaign under suspension for marijuana possession.

Despite the strike, which slashed Los Angeles' first exhibition game attendance to a record-low 28,021 last week, a spokesman for the Rams said about 50,000 fans are expected to show up to watch the two veteran quarterbacks—and Dallas' No. 2 passer, Craig Morton—duel once more.

Meyer Begins Building State Antitrust Division

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer Friday defused legislative criticism of his antitrust activities.

Meyer said he is beginning to build an antitrust division within the Department of Justice under authority granted to him in 1974 legislation.

"It's not going to be a flashy one," the attorney general told the Legislature's Judiciary Committee.

"We're not going to launch a big public anti-trust drive."

One Of Best

But, Meyer said, "I want to build (a division) for my successor," one which, he predicted, will be "one of the best . . . in the country."

Meyer is leaving his post as attorney general next January, and will be replaced by a successor chosen by the voters in the November general election.

Several members of the Judiciary Committee had been critical of what they viewed as Meyer's inaction in implementing the new law and the state's lack of participation in a meat price fixing lawsuit filed by Sens. Loran Schmit of Bellwood and John DeCamp of Neligh.

Barnett, Fellman Satisfied

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, who raised the issue at a committee meeting last month, and Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha, who asked the committee to schedule a meeting with Meyer, said they were satisfied with his report.

"His position is totally responsible," Fellman said. Although there might be alternate ways to proceed to implement the antitrust law, he said, he is satisfied and "I do not intend to pursue this matter further."

Meyer said state authority to enter antitrust lawsuits in order to bring class actions on behalf of citizens has been eroded by recent federal court decisions.

Even beyond that, he noted, "I have no evidence to justify us in initiating such an action" in the meat price case.

Meyer said he was not contacted about the case by either Schmit or DeCamp.

Efforts Hampered

His efforts to establish the authorized antitrust division have been hampered by a lack of office space and the difficulty in hiring people who may be assured of employment only until his departure in January, Meyer said.

But his office is "pleased to get this authority," he noted.

The 1974 legislation established the new antitrust division, widened the attorney general's powers and provided $100,000 in funding to implement the new activities.

Even under its earlier, more limited authority, Meyer noted, the state has participated in antitrust actions in the electrical, asphalt, drug and plumbing equipment industries.

NAPE Seeks Minimum Wage, Annual Cost Of Living Raises

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Association of Public Employees (NAPE) will ask the 1975 Legislature to adjust state employees' salaries annually to reflect increases in the cost of living index.

Roger D. Schulz, the new executive secretary of the 1,200-member organization, said the cost of living bill and another seeking a $5,000-$5,500 minimum wage for full-time state employees will be NAPE's top concerns during the upcoming Legislature.

Last year two similar bills failed to pass. Instead, senators approved a 5% plus $300 raise for most State employees.

Schulz said state employees need those two measures despite the state's tight economic outlook.

The legislative priorities were approved recently by NAPE's legislative committee, he said, and will be more specific after further discussion with legislators and the administration.

Other priorities include:

— Inclusion of all state employees, except academic and elected officials, under one pay plan and personnel system. Currently, 15,000 of the state's 32,000 employees are under the pay plan set up by the Exon administration.

— A bill mandating expenditure of all funds appropriated for health and life insurance coverage. Schulz said roughly $2.50 per employee is being put in an escrow account since insurance costs were less than originally anticipated.

— A provision for longevity pay increases.

— Overtime pay for employees whose normal work week includes weekend and holiday work.

— Day-care services for low-income state employees.

— Lounge and infirmary facilities in all state office buildings.

Town Problems Is Youth Meet Topic

More than 200 Nebraska youth will be in Lincoln Sunday through Tuesday for a conference designed "to help them better understand the problems facing their home towns."

The occasion is the 14th annual Nebraska Conference of Youth, sponsored by the Nebraska Council of Youth (NCY) and the Nebraska Committee for Children and Youth (NCCY).

can help solve community problems, especially those relating to youth.

Gov. J. James Exon will address the delegates at a closing luncheon Tuesday on "Youth: How to Play the Game." Exon has praised the annual conference as "a worthwhile experience for the delegates and a sound investment in Nebraska's future."

In the Monday session, a panel of politicians and administrators will "challenge" delegates. Panel members are former State Sen. Wayne Ziebart; Eugene Leahy, former Omaha mayor; William Apway, mayor of Alexandria; Secretary of State Allen Beermann; State Sen.

Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, and Martin Rotunno, director of parks and recreation in Kearney.

Conference Speakers

Other scheduled speakers include Dr. Duane Olsen, extension economist for the Cooperative Extension Service; Ken Schmidt, associate state 4-H leader; Dr. Fritz Edelstein, project coordinator for the Study Committee on Education at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; and Rod Ruzanic, a former delegate who is now regional manager of Oxford Films.

Don H. Ehly of Sutton is the chairman of the Nebraska Council of Youth. Conference chairmen for 1974 are Suzanne Reighter of Sutton and Karl Stortvedt of Norfolk.

Text Of Ford's Address

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Transcript of President Ford's address immediately after being sworn in as the 38th President of the United States:

Mr. Chief Justice, my dear friends, my fellow Americans.

The oath that I have taken is the same oath that was taken by George Washington, and by every president under the Constitution. But I assume the presidency under extraordinary circumstances never before experienced by Americans.

This is an hour of history that troubles our minds and hurts our hearts.

Therefore I feel it is my first duty to make an unprecedented compact with my countrymen: not an inaugural address, not a fireside chat, not a campaign speech, just a little straight talk among friends and I intend it to be the first of many.

I am acutely aware that you have not elected me as your President by your ballots. So I ask you to confirm me as your President with your prayers and I hope that such prayers will also be the first of many. If you have not chosen me by secret ballot, neither have I gained office by any secret promises. I've not campaigned for either the presidency or the vice presidency. I have not subscribed to any partisan platform. I'm indebted to no man, and only to one woman, my dear wife.

As I begin this very difficult job, I have not sought this enormous responsibility, but I will not shrink it.

Those who nominated and confirmed me as vice president were my friends and are my friends. They were of both parties, elected by all the people, and acting under the Constitution in their name. It is only fitting then that I should pledge to them, and to you, that I will be the President of all the people.

Thomas Jefferson said the 'The people are the only sure reliance with the preservation of our liberty.' And down the years Abraham Lincoln renewed this American article of faith asking 'Is there any better way for equal hope in the world?'

I intend on next Monday next to request of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President Pro Tempore of the Senate the privilege of appearing before the Congress to share with my former colleagues, and with you, the American people, my views on the priority business of the nation and to solicit your views and their views.

And may I say to the speaker and the others if I could meet with you right after these remarks I would appreciate it.

Even though this is late in an election year, there is no way we can go forward except together and no way anybody can win except by serving the people's urgent needs. We cannot stand still or slip backwards—we must go forward now, together.

To the peoples and the governments of all friendly nations, and I hope that could encompass the whole world, I pledge an uninterrupted and sincere search for peace. America will remain strong and united, but its strength will remain dedicated to the safety and sanity of the entire family of Man, as well as to our own precious freedom.

I believe that truth is the glue that holds government together—not only our government, but civilization itself.

That bond, though stained, is unbroken at home and abroad. In all my public and private acts as your President, I expect to
